

morning, they met in the pleasant grounds, there was a smile on her lips.

"Mrs. Beach has told me all, Mr. Thornley," she said. "How you must have hated me. Can you forgive me?"

Thornley looked at her. Something in his glance sent the blood into her cheeks.

"On condition that you—stay a long time."

And, long before their holiday had elapsed, it was recognized that Mr. Beach had a new kind of mental case in his house, which could only be cured—as this one was—by a long white veil and orange blossoms.

DISHES OUR AMERICAN GOVERNORS LIKE BEST

When young William Haines worked from "sun-up until sundown" on a Maine farm 30 years ago his favorite dish was baked beans. Now he's governor of his native state, but he still prefers the juicy, well-browned dish of beans to any of the fancy dishes served at the governor's table.

BY MRS. WILLIAM T. HAINES,
Executive Mansion, Augusta, Me.

My husband always enjoys a good appetite and it would be hard for me to tell what his favorite dishes are.

He was raised up on a farm and is particularly fond of all of the old-fashioned home-made country dishes.

I think the things he enjoys the best of anything are the Sunday morning baked beans and the Friday's boiled salt codfish with pork scraps and beet pickles. He is also especially fond of fish and vegetable hash. He seldom eats pastry of any kind and cares nothing for fancy dishes. He is a great lover of fruit and vegetables of all kinds—is a very small meat eater, but he eats his New England doughnut with a cup of coffee regularly every morning.

I am not giving recipes for these dishes as they are to be found in any old-fashioned cook book.

SHE HITS THE HIGH COST OF LIVING WITH RECIPE

Editor Day Book:—In a recent number of your paper you state, "Please, Mrs. Reader, etc.," but I wish to state I happen to be a Miss Reader.

But I suppose you will heed my advice, even so. As you say times are hard, and one will find eggs are very high, and one might wish to eat cake more often if it did not come so expensive, so I am volunteering a recipe on "One Egg Cake."

One Egg Cake.

One-half cup milk, 1 rounded teaspoon baking powder, 1 heaping tablespoon butter, 1 cup sugar, 1 large cupful flour, 1 egg. Bake in three layers, filling with jelly or any filling desired.—Miss Hazel Levy, 1901 Fremont St.

PLENTY OF TUITION

If a German wishes to drive a motor car he must first take out a one month's tuition license, which permits him to learn to drive. At the end of the month he is taken into the heart of a large city, and with an official by his side is made to drive in and out of the traffic.

One little slip, a slight hesitation in slowing up, and back he is put for another month of tuition. There are many cases in which even three months' tuition is insisted on, and there are others in which licenses are refused altogether. The result of this is that the accident percentage in Berlin is only half that of large cities in the United States.—Top-Notch.
