WHAT'S THE ANSWER? — The courts of Seattle are up against a poser. In trial of a criminal case the jury, of which a prominent woman was a member, disagreed. The judge refused to discharge the jury and ordered it locked up, "incommunicado" for the night.

The lady member had a two-months-old infant that hungrily insisted upon an interview.

Daddy at home procured a taxicab, took the youngster to the court house, and the judge sent it up to the jury room by a deputy sheriff.

Now the defendant claims that the law was violated in admitting a person not a member of the jury into the jury room. What's your idea about it?

SHAKE, BROTHER HAWKINS!

Here's a right hearty hand-clasp for Hawkins Boykin of Johnson County, N. C. A tenant, while plowing on his farm, turned up $500 in cold coin, supposed to have been buried years ago.

Did Boykin claim it as the owner of the land? No, sir! He told the finder, who needed it more, to keep it, which though a little thing, perhaps, is worth any man's hand-shake in our opinion.

WELL, THEY CAN.—Uncle Sam can now boast of three women state senators, Mrs. Helen Ring Robinson of Colorado, Mrs. Frances Munds of Arizona, and Miss Catherine Clark of Oregon, all of whom are ably demonstrating that women can make as good laws as they can biscuits.

SHORT ONES

An auto loaded with saloonkeepers ran away, jumped a wall and smashed through the front windows of a soft drink factory. You can't stop that dry movement.

The sweetest revenge of the disappointed suitor is to send his gift to the June bride by special delivery, inclosing a note saying he feared it would be too late.

The worst rap at the United States navy yet taken was when a foreign power ordered two dozen can openers for each of its warships.

Mr. Balfour, as head of the greatest navy in the world, somehow reminds us of the young lady who called the piano tuner to examine her sprained ankle.

We wonder who those European diplomats make trouble for after they are chased home.

A pessimist is one who, when June comes, thinks of June bugs instead of June brides.
