

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL!—"TRAIN YOUR LIPS TO EXPRESS BEAUTY ADVISES LILLIAN GISH

LILLIAN GISH

Miss Lillian Gish Posing Especially To Illustrate This Beauty Article.

BY ESTHER HOFFMAN

One of the prettiest mouths that speaks the eloquent silent language of the moving pictures is that of Lillian Gish. She has the short upper lip that is shaped like a cupid's bow and the under lip that some poet has described as "being stung by the bee that was sipping honey there."

It is a mouth made for expressing love, although it has the soft curving lips of a child.

"A girl who has a beautiful mouth will always be called lovely," a man said to me the other day, and yet few women train their lips to express beauty.

"Can you train your lips to express beauty?" I asked.

"You can train your mouth to express anything," she answered, uncompromisingly. "Indeed you are always training, either consciously or subconsciously, your mouth to express something.

"If you think ugly thoughts your mouth will be hard and cynical.

"If you love every one and look upon the bright side of life you will keep the sweet trusting mouth of a