"A plain girl can in the slang language of today 'get away with it' if she will look pleasant," said ever smiling Dorothy Gish the other day when asked what a homely girl should do to make people forget her plainness.

"You know," she continued, "there are no real ugly girls in the world. Every girl is pretty to someone—if she can only find him.

"You know a famous beauty started on a career of 'beauty advisor' a few years ago with that one creed.

"Look pleasant. Smile with the world and at the world. Smile when you are happy and smile if you are sad. Smile at yourself and with your friends.

"Laugh at your enemies and at those who hate you and the first thing you know you will be the most popular girl in your set. People won't look any farther than your smile and it goes without saying they will say: 'I like that girl with the entrancing smile.'"
