SEAMEN'S LAW AT WORK

New York, Nov. 4.—The LaFollette seamen's law, by which congress attempts to extend American standards to all shipping plying to our ports regardless of nationality, goes into effect today. A canvass of shipping centers yesterday failed to reveal any concrete damage. Agents were loquacious over iniquity of measure, but could not point to any special injury it had worked.

Steamship companies yesterday sent squads of men to the local board of steamship inspectors for examination under new law.

Ants have the faculty of crossing water by means of the surface tension of the liquid, but they resort to it only under great necessity.
