

BASEBALL—SPORTS OF ALL KINDS—BOXING

Out at the University of Chicago they are still stirred up because some rough ticket scalpers got hold of some tickets for the Illinois game tomorrow, but if this brand of weather continues the situation will take care of itself.

The scalpers will get stuck with the pasteboards and the dear public may get a chance to view the game for less than the market price. Which will be a pleasant surprise for the dear public. Some people may be willing and glad to pay $2 for a football ticket, but it sounds like too much money.

The game itself should also be influenced by the heavy going. Straw spread over the field has failed to prevent the rain soaking through to the soil and prospects are for a muddy and slippery gridiron. Both teams play open football, relying on speed for their gains, and may have to revise their plans of campaign. This should come easier to Illinois, which in the past has shown a better line.

Coach Zuppke has his athletes housed at the Chicago Beach hotel and has already given out his line-up, which is sure to include Pogue and Clark from the first whistle. Applegran, the big guard, will be kept in reserve.

Wisconsin is perfecting a defense that may stop Minnesota's drive. The Badgers have the best line that has faced the Gophers this year, boasting in Capt. Buck the best linesman of the west. Juncan feels his backfield is capable and the result hinges on whether the Gopher rush can be halted.

Capt. Mahan of Harvard will play tomorrow against Yale, despite intimations that he is a professional because he accepted money as instructor of athletics at a boys' training camp last summer. Mahan denies he filled such at position and at this late date the Yale people will not bring forward any complaints.

Yale will take the field tomorrow with the same team that rose and defeated Princeton, and Harvard will have its regular complement with the exception of Tom Enwright, the plunging halfback. Enwright is out because of study disqualifications, but the story is now made public that he also played baseball on a semi-pro team in Worcester, Mass.

Welker Cochran defeated George Sutton in the 18-2 handicap billiard tournament at New York, 500 to 415. Sutton gave the young Chicagoan a handicap of 100. George Slosson downed Mayer, 375 to 279.

Englewood and Crane high schools will battle for the Chicago high school football championship at American Giants' park at 2 o'clock tomorrow.

Jack Ness, first baseman of the Oakland coast league club, has signed a contract to play with the White Sox in 1916.

Chicago's second six-day race will start at 10 o'clock tonight, when Commodore James A. Pugh of the Sportsmen's club will fire the gun. The riders will ride the full 144 hours and the management announces that special prizes, or "primes," will be offered the riders during the week for special sprints. The Berlin finish will govern the race on Thursday night (Thanksgiving.)

The sprints which opened a week of racing last night were satisfying to the crowd that turned out, despite bad weather. Kockler, Chicago Cycle club, won the 3-mile open and finished second in the half-mile handicap to A. Van der Palt of the Belgian A. C. Frank Corry of Australia won the five-mile open professional, Eddie Root of Boston finishing second. Clarence Carman, Jamaica, won the 20-mile motor-paced event, Bobby Walthour, the Atlanta veteran being second.

Hal Church, Yale end, is more a pupil of Tom Shevlin, hero coach,
