

new feller in harlem who dislocated his own jaw 2 times & now the dock says dont you laff no more or you will bust it again, you pore nut

they was having a party at the man's house & 1 feller told a goak which made mr. withers laff so hard he dislocated his jaw, & then when the dock got it fixed he laffed so hard because he had busted up his jaw works that he dislocated it again.

say said the dock to the other feller after he had fixed the nut's face the 2nd time, what was this funny goak well, the guy ecksplanes, a forenor who works on the n. y. central rr. always brought rabbit for lunch & one day the fourman says to him bill i wish you wood bring me some rabbit tomorrer, you seem to have so much of it and bill says alrite, boss, i will so next day he handed the boss a hunk of rabbit which the boss fed to his face & said it was verry fine eating but tell me bill, he inkwired, where do you grab off all these rabbits.

i don't grab them aff said bll, i shoots them

how do you find them, the fourman said they come rite up to my house at nite & say meow, meow and i goes out and shoots 1 evry nite the dock never cracked a smile, but maybe that was because his wife had some nice fricassay of rabbjt for his supper that nite.

TODAY'S BELLRINGER

The story is related of a Boston contractor who was startled one morning when his foreman rushed in with the news that one of their new houses had tumbled down in the night.

"What caused it?" asked the boss.

"Why the workmen took down the scaffolding before they got the wall paper on!" said the subordinate.

ALAS, POOR BOOZE!

One of the Round girls—the bow legged one—gave Maj. Fairplay the mitten the other night. She says he boozes too much.—Irrigon, Ore., Irrigator.

(Incidentally see how many times you can say "The Irrigon Oregon Irrigator" without gettin' all balled up.)

A CONSIDERABLE AILMENT

"I wonder just what is the matter with the Kaiser," said Dubbleigh.

"I don't know," said Binks, "but it is pronounced 'Zwiggelhammerstein-ablitzenfestenzing.'"

"Great Scott!" cried Dubbleigh. "It must have taken a Superman of a Doctor to pronounce that."

What is that which occurs twice in a moment, once in a minute and not once in a thousand years? The letter M.
