National League. — No games scheduled.

Fielder Jones is gradually dissipating his inheritance. He has just shipped Earl Hamilton to Detroit. Next!

Glimpsing the field in a race at the Montreal track we note the entry of Wall Street in one event. There's a rich name for a nag.

Pitcher Guy Morton hails from Waterbury, but that doesn't account for his long wind-up. Right now he's the whole works for Cleveland.

Hainie Zimmerman rises to remark that his favorite writer is the man who makes out the pay checks.

Now is the time for canning. Tomatoes, lima beans, phenomis, etc., are in order.

One guy who has seen them in action says just because the Yale crew rows backward is no reason why it shouldn't come forward.

You gotta hand it to the Nickalls brothers for getting soft snaps. One is working out every day in a nice cool trench, while the other is trying to teach Yale rah rah boys to row.

NESS BATTING WELL — SHOULD GET REGULAR JOB

By Mark Shields

Jack Ness should not, and probably will not, be supplanted at first base for the White Sox, for a few days anyhow. The big Coast man is playing some excellent baseball at the present time and his hitting shows the consistency that helped him smash the world's record last season.

Ness is putting in at least one hit per battle, and they are being delivered when they can count for the greatest results. The pinch is greatly to his liking and men on bases do not worry him in the least degree.

And pitchers who throw with either arm look all the same to Jack. He smashes just as vigorously against the right-handers as at the south-paws. This means the first-base shift may go into the discard, which will be an excellent gain for the defensive teamwork of the South Side club.

In the sudden uprising of yesterday Ness took a prominent part. He contributed two hits and each came when men were on base. One counted a single tally and his second bingle was good for a couple of counters. This fine attack and his fielding around the first station have won to Ness the ardent support of South Side fans and he is already a popular hero.

This vocal support by the fans is an excellent thing for a young man attempting to cement himself to a regular job and should spur him on to greater achievements.

Ed Collins hit one double in three times at bat, and Ray Schalk poled three singles in four efforts. The remaining members of the cast, with exception of the pitchers, amassed two blows each, John Collins and Zeb Terry each smearing important
