Phil Ball, boss of the St. Louis Browns, says the continued rain is having a bad effect on his crop of long green.

Good ballplayers, like horses, can be ruined by hard riding.

Verily, murder will out. We are now informed that Mike Gibbons was once a wrestler.

Christy Mathewson is said to be suffering from fresh kinks in his well-known pitching arm. Which same means he probably will come across with a shut-out his next time on the peak.

A champion swimmer has deserted the water for vaudeville, but the circus still remains the mecca of the boxfighter.

Speaking of encouragement, there is the headline: "Brooklyn Rooters Wondering Whether Team Will Crack."

EDDIE COLLINS SHAKES SLUMP WITH THREE HITS

By Mark Shields

Eddie Collins won a ball game for the White Sox yesterday with his bat, something that has not occurred for many long afternoons. The total of the Columbia boy's batting strength was a single, double and triple, and the shortest and longest hit each came in a rally during which the Sox counted three runs.

It was the Collins of the past freeing himself from a batting slump that is the longest Eddie or any other recognized star has suffered for many moons. Eddie is a ball player, a star. Even when he was not hitting, when his average was a hundred points below his normal notch, he has looked like the real thing, for his defensive work has been excellent, and he has been full of pepper and enthusiasm all the time.

The shaking of this historic slump was the cause of a jollification on the Sox bench. In the eighth, with the score tied and Weaver on first, Ed smashed a triple to center field, and later scored. When he reached the dug out the athletes crowded around him, slapped him on the back, and Buck actually picked Ed up in his arms and carried him up and down the boards.

With Collins hitting, the array of the Sox is much altered.

Lefty Williams, the young Sox southpaw, should have gone through the full game against Boston, and been effective all the way. He was scored on in the second inning because Jackson fell down and let an easy single go for a home run. But the thing that really upset Williams occurred in the fifth inning, when Manager Rowland let the ladies' day crowd mahage his ball club.
