

NEW YORK'S MANNIQUINS THREATEN STRIKE —ONLY 20 MINUTES FOR CHANGE

New York, June 19.—When Hank Sprogs of Amherstburg was lamping the procession of wealth and pulchritude on Fifth av. and feasting his eyes on a vision of loveliness that swept by with all the stateliness of Riverside drive, he was amazed to see a rough-looking man step up to the dazzling danusel and to hear the rude person say:

"Shoulders further back! Chin higher; and walk on the bottom of your feet—not the sides!"

Then his city nephew broke the news to Hank.

"That dame's a mannequin," said he. "She wears clothes for a business—to demonstrate her dressmaker's style and skill for the benefit of possible customers. The man is manager of the models. He walks along and tells them what to do and when to do it."

Manniquins are threatening to
