

EVEN THE RAINBOW PALES BEFORE THE GAUDY MIDSUMMER SWEATER

Quite the gayest thing that has bloomed this season is the midsummer sweater. Sometimes it is hand-painted in gay-colored flowers, sometimes it is trimmed with a sash of gaudy hue. Sometimes it is checked and sometimes striped, but always as bright as a garden of flowers.

These models were sketched from Fashion-Art. The sweater is canary color fiber silk with a crinkly stripe of blue. The cuffs and collar are trimmed with blue.

The prim person in skirt and waist shows the newest patch in patch pockets. Her parasol is lined with striped silk that matches her blue and white striped skirt. Her blouse is sheerest hankiechief linen in white, with blue frill to collar.

Hostess (at party) — Does your mother allow you to have two pieces of pie when you are at home, Wille?

Wille (who has asked for a second piece) — No, ma'am.

Hostess — Well, do you think she'd like you to have two pieces here?

Wille (confidently) — Oh, she wouldn't care. This isn't her pie.
