

JOHNNY'S LETTER

new york.—mr. cheaf of polise woods says that a cronik crook wood rather steel than have annything given to him and that he aint happy if he cant steel something but a lot of peepel says be is all rong & dont know what he is speeking about then mr. h. j. stone of newton, n. j. comes to bat with a story that he says aint no nature fake atall but proves the cheaf was rite in his theory & mr. stone says dogs is like men he had a dog that strayed to his house & the fambly took quiet a shine to the pup & decided to keep it but the dog woodent eat no matter how manny peaces of meat & things like that they wood give him finally mr. stone says that is a funny dog he wont eat a thing, but his littel boy notised that the dog wood beet it out 2 or 3 times a day so his father follered the dog & saw him hang around peepel's backdoor at seyril houses until he came to 1 where the butcher boy had left out some meet, the lady being away, and that dog grabs the meet & eats it

mr. stone says that dog is a born thief and wont eat anny thing he cant steel now they keep the pup at home by not feeding him nothing & they put the bones and scraps in the refrigerator & leave the door open & when they are out of the room the dog will speek up and steel them but he wont touch them if they offer them to him

CHESTNUT CHARLIE

INVENTIONS

A Milwaukee marvel has invented a ladder with ventilating holes between the rungs. It is thought by scientists that this solves the problem of ventilating ladders.

Aztec corn 1,000 years old was recently planted in Kansas. It grows much faster than modern corn.
