HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX PROFIT BY FAIRNESS

A well-paid, satisfied worker is the most profitable to the employer. There is proof of this in the fiscal report of Hart, Schaffner & Marx for the year ending Nov. 30, 1916.

Earnings of the Hart, Schaffner & Marx company were greater last year than in any other year in the firm's history. Profits and interest were $1,792,002, against $1,287,506 for the previous year.

Yet Hart, Schaffner & Marx is running a union workshop and pay more money for a shorter workday and have better working conditions than rivals who fought and won a long strike against the women they employ because they said a clothing firm could not afford to pay the slight wage increase the women demanded.
