U. S. WOULD GET SERVICES OF WRIGHT IN CASE OF WAR

New York, Feb. 12. — Orville Wright, inventor of aeroplanes, announced today that in case of war he would abandon private affairs and offer his services to help organize an aerial army.

"We have pitifully small number of military and licensed civilian pilots," said Wright, "but it takes but about two weeks to develop and train a good military aerial observer.

"I favor the small, high-climbing plane. Every step in the European war has proved that it is the light, quick machine that can get up and down and around rapidly that is the most effective.

"You can't combine weight and efficiency in aircraft. The heavily-armored plane has been a failure.

"I would be absolutely against the manufacture of Zeppelins or dirigibles except for observation purposes. As an offensive weapon in war the Zeppelin has been a flat failure."

Glass is now made so as to be practically unbreakable.
