

ly risen) I found myself in Jeff Perrygreen's arms.

"I think my first impression was one of surprise and then, Margie, I found out I liked it.

"As soon as I had this sensation, I drew away, for it seemed to me to be almost a sacrilege to allow any man to kiss me after I had given my kisses to Earnest Lawton.

"There's the horrible part of not knowing, Margie, what is coming after. I had kissed Earnest Lawton innocently, believing I was his promised wife, and now I must feel soiled if I allowed any other man to kiss me.

"'Paula, Paula,' said Jeff, 'do you love me? Does this mean that you will be my wife?'

"I caught my breath. Had I committed myself? And then I said demurely: 'It means, kind sir, that you took me by surprise and pressed an unfair advantage.'

"'No,' he answered, 'I pressed the fairest girl in the world.'

"Then we both laughed, and the strained situation settled into the old comradeship that had grown up between Jeff and me.

—○—○— SUPREME CT. REVERSES SMITH ON LORIMER BANK CASE

Stockholders in companies that go bankrupt are liable under the law for double the amount of their stock holdings is decision of supreme court in Lorimer bank case. Judge Frederick A. Smith's decision is reversed. Smith said Central Trust Co. should pay $1,250,000 to Lorimer bank creditors because Pres. Charles G. Dawes and officers of Central Trust Co. had loaned $1,250,000 to the Lorimer bank (for a couple of minutes), so it could go onto the records of the state bank examiner that the Lorimer bank was possessor of $1,250,000. The supreme court action is causing more comment. Daily News and Day Book editorially backed up Judge Smith at time of his decision.
