TALK ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

How New York and San Francisco are Fast Being United by a Small Copper Wire Over Which the Human Voice is Transmitted.

Within the last few days the citizens of Salt Lake in particular, and of Utah in general, have had brought home to them in impressive manner the fact that the achievements of electricity are well nigh boundless.

Each so delicately constructed in its mechanism as to readily catch up and send forward the articulations of the voice with such energy as to throw it on to the next station. This may be done soon. It may not be done for years.

Within the last week Salt Laker have used it as a means of communicating their thoughts by word of mouth over greater distances than heretofore, and that brings to mind the fact that a small copper wire now almost spans the continent from New York to San Francisco.
