

Chester Nason's Weird Ogden Tales.

"We will not have a drawing room for three days, and all I can give you is a few five," said Chester Nason, at the door of the ticket office yesterday morning, as he dexterously shuffled a bundle of sleeper charts and placed them under the counter.

"They always were that way, and they always will be so," soliloquized Nason, at the same time ousting "Ticket" from the cool corner near the telephone.

"I can remember the old days up at Ogden before the Union depot was built. It was the same then; but, we did have some fun. Those were the days when Joe Young was not superintendent of the Utah division, and Col. Benton was in the Gould office around the corner.

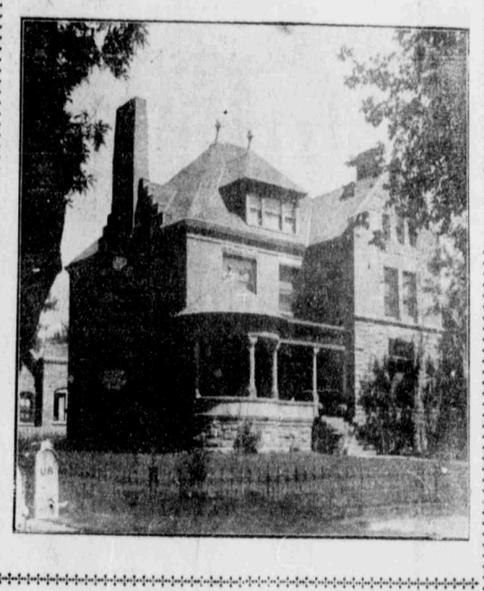

The outcome of the matter was that she spent an hour listening to the hot air that he handed her and finally bought up about seventy-five dollars worth of old junk to take home and adorn her boudoir.

"For the next few hours Alf sweat drops of blood. He scoured the town for Indians, without any result and was nearly desperate as the time drew near for the theatrical party to arrive.

stampeding buffaloes. Half the town was there, too, and taken all in all it was a sight for the Looleos. Paster and Paster danced the Indians and louder and shriller they yelled until things began to look serious.

"Oh, that is old, but now you mention it that fellow ought to wear trousers so that his legs could cast a shadow," ventured Chester.

BEAUTIFUL OGDEN HOMES.

RESIDENCE OF M. S. BROWNING. Ogden is proud of the magnificent home of her Mayor, M. S. Browning, which is shown in the above cut.

Market Places of San Salvador.

Brigham Young Academy Expedition in Salvador's Capital. Received and Entertained by Friends - U. S. Minister Jenkins an Old Time Resident of Utah - Sights in the City Markets - Paradise for Smokers - The American Colony - Rainy Season Begun.

SAN SALVADOR, the capital of El Salvador, is a city of some eighty thousand inhabitants. Its location, its suburbs and especially its volcanic cones on its east and west sides, make it one of the prettiest cities we have seen.

MAY ACCOMPANY WILLIAM.

It is regarded as extremely probable that the German empress will accompany her imperial spouse when he makes his contemplated visit to Russia.

ness, especially such business as would aid his fellow countryman. He is a man of perhaps sixty years, with sharp, grey eyes, white hair and iron grey moustache and goatee.

The next day according to appointment he presented us to the minister of Hacienda, with the result that we were furnished with a letter of introduction to the military and civil authorities of the republic.

Besides the consul we met three other Americans: one Mr. Calve, representing the Sims-Dudley, Deane & Company of New York city, and apparently very much interested in anything that tends to promote a revolution.

On Sunday, with Mr. Calve as guide and interpreter, we all took in the markets, of which the city has three. We chose Sunday not only because we were going to leave the next day, but because it is the best day of the week.

While there are some fruits and vegetables in the general market, it is stocked principally with dry goods and groceries. The market covers a block, with little stores on the outside facing the street, and stalls facing inward on the inside.

A GALLANT YOUNG UTAH SAILOR.

Robert Morris of Salt Lake, Naval Representative, Who Has Served on the Battleship Iowa, and Who is Now on the Philadelphia En Route to Samoa.

CADET ROBERT MORRIS. The above cut is an excellent picture of Naval Cadet Robert Morris, one of Utah's representatives in the United States navy.

was made of sugar and rice, both raised abundantly in the republic. Some coffee was displayed, but this product is mostly exported.

Rice in all grades except the best was shown to advantage. In the cultivation and manufacture of rice the people use the most primitive methods.

One product of the country was seen in all the markets. It is exposed for sale in all the stores, the shops, the both in places suitable and not suitable.

sell for 50 cents a hundred in silver. The poorer qualities sell for less. In the capital the price is higher, one dollar a hundred.

The same difficulty with money matters occurred at the post office here that we had in Guatemala. The stamps are issued in decimal denominations, while the money still clings to the real.

On Monday morning, May 12, we bade our friends good bye and were soon on the road to San Miguel, the third city in size in the republic, distant from the capital somewhat over a hundred miles.

to carry the burdens, not the shoulders. If a person goes for a bucket of water, not only the bucket with water is carried on the head, but the empty bucket as well, though it may not weigh two pounds.

AMERICAN VS ENGLISH LOCOMOTIVES. The fact about the relative fuel economy of American and English locomotives is made tolerably clear in a letter published by an officer of the Baldwin Locomotive works.

SHE LIKES THE PHILIPPINES.

Here are the photographs of Lieut. Cromwell Stacey of the United States army, and Mrs. Marion B. Stacey, his newly wedded wife.

changed the center of gravity, but she did not drop them. The roads were good, our animals were rested and we were able to make good time.

RAINY SEASON BEGUN. And now the rainy season has set in. While in San Salvador we were caught in two good storms and since then it has rained once a day either in the night or day.

LIETENANT CROMWELL STACEY. Here are the photographs of Lieut. Cromwell Stacey of the United States army, and Mrs. Marion B. Stacey, his newly wedded wife.