

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM

Miss Emma Lucy Gates Declines a Tempting Offer— Passover Week Among the New York Jews—A Visit to Ex-Governor Frank Fuller—Movements of the Elders, Etc.

Special Correspondence.

New York, April 26.—This is holy week, the feast of Passover, with our Jewish neighbors, when every house must be set in perfect order, when only new china and new crockery must be used, and "matzoth," the unleavened bread, must be eaten exclusively, when each member of the household must taste horseradish and sweetened apple sauce—symbolical of the bitterness of bondage, and of delight for the release of ancient Israel. If one enjoys seeing queer sights and strange customs, he has only to take a car down Second avenue to Grand and Hester streets, and around Seward park, to be fully gratified in his desire. From the moment you swing around the quaint old church at the corner of Stuyvesant street and Second avenue, until you are face to face with Ridley's of by-gone fame, on Grand street and the Bowery, and until you reach Hester, which is the very heart of the Yiddish quarter, it is one moving panorama of color, odor and jargon. Every one is out in holiday attire. And such costumes! Little children of 2 and 3 years, dressed in bright red, and purple, looking for all the world like miniature clowns; wee girls in bright colored aprons, made in the fashion of our grandmothers', when they attended sewed quilting bees; then the noise, the smells, the confusion and the push carts, with every imaginable article for sale, but always the green, red, orange and yellow predominating. Old grey haired men, with snow white beards, who look foreign to all that is going on around them, and the women wearing more wigs to the square black than you could find in all the hair stores on Broadway and Sixth avenue, for the population in these districts is overcrowded to suffocation. No work is supposed to be done this week, but occasionally from a side street you will see the family wash floating from the front piazza, to the delight of the street urchin, who pelts it with peanuts or any garbage that is handy. These are sights not to be missed by any one with a craving for the novel.

Prof. Stephens, Charlie Pike and Clarence Neesen sailed Wednesday from Boston for Europe. Elders Pike and Neesen go direct to Berlin, while Prof. Stephens will make his way to Norway and Sweden as soon as possible, there to meet his dear friend, Elder Will Christopherson, who is laboring in the Christiana conference.

Elder Challis of Franklin, Idaho; Elder Olsen of Iona, Idaho, and Elder W. J. Startup, the well known business man of Provo, all passed through New York this week, on their way home from their well filled missions in England, Ireland and Norway.

Herbert Foulger of Ogden, who was called to England on a mission a few weeks ago, arrived in New York last week with Elder Belknap, who goes to Germany, and Elder Reader, who will fill a mission in Switzerland; Elders Greenwell and Anderson, who go to England and Germany, also called on us, and all sail from Boston on Wednesday the 23rd of April.

"The sunshine" fad, better known as the bareheaded fad, like "ping pong," has struck New York hard. It originated in Washington with Prince Troubetskay, husband of Amelia Rives, and has gradually spread into all the large cities. Riverside drive, the "Rotten Row" of New York, is daily the haunt of these followers of this sensible fashion. Naturally, the men are foremost with this new idea, the fair sex not adopting it so readily in the city, as they do at the seashore and mountain resorts. The men start out with a small cap which is thrust into a side pocket as soon as convenient, and for hours the throng that rides, walks and uses the bicycle track is to be seen taking its exercise hatless. As it is becoming more popular each day, it is not unusual to see a lady now and then, with only nature's fair adornment for her head covering. It is a fad, of course, but such a healthy one, and one that receives so much encouragement from the upper ten, that, like the bicycle and automobile, it is destined to live, and yearly add to its numbers.

Hon. J. W. Young sailed for Paris Tuesday, April 22, on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. He will land at Cherbourg, and proceed by rail to the capital, where he will remain a month or six weeks, attending to business.

John Wesley Young, with his cousin, Miss Lulu Gates, left Saturday night for Utah. They will meet Mrs. Gates in Chicago and all go home together. Both these young people will be greatly missed in our small circle, for both have endeared themselves to everyone by their unselfish ways and kind acts towards all. We wish them success, wherever their lots may be cast, and trust that their absence may only be temporary, as the colony cannot afford to lose them. As for Mrs. Gates, her departure from our midst has left a void that only her presence can fill; we all look forward to the reunion in the autumn with fondest hope and pleasure.

Just before she left for Salt Lake, Miss Lucy Gates received a tempting offer to go into opera here. Mr. William Stewart, manager of the Castle Square opera company in Boston, offered her $500 a week for a summer season in light opera roles. Her plans, however, would not allow her to accept the offer, tempting as it was.

Our street meetings in New York and Brooklyn are working wonders. Elders Horace Nebeker and Guy Clark have taken possession of the corner of 135th street and Seventh avenue. Elders Horace Cummings and Daniel Coulam declare in favor of the corner of 135th street and Lenox avenue, and Elders Pollett and Lawrence Taylor can be found almost any evening at the corner of 16th street and Lexington avenue. These elders are constantly reinforced by others in the branch. In Brooklyn, Elders J. R. Foster and Tibbitts, are holding street meetings, almost nightly, going from one quarter of the city to another, often assisted by Elder Eastmond and some of the local elders.

On Tuesday we are expecting President McQuarrie, who has been visiting the Maryland and Pennsylvania conferences. He will only remain a short time, as he is due in the New England and Albany conferences the coming week.

Another young elder has been added to our forces. LaFayette Woods of Barclay, Nevada, will labor in the New York and Brooklyn branch this coming summer.

At the corner of Fifth Avenue and Twelfth street, if you are looking skyward, you will see a big advertisement, announcing "Health Food" in large type; if you lower your eyes to the plate glass windows, you will also read the same sign; if you step inside you will be greeted by the sweetest of odors in the bread way, imaginable, and if you have the courage to walk the length of the Chinese matting you will come to a glass door, and on it is written "Private office." But by that time you have grown bold, and knock a wee bit timidly, it is true, but the moment you hear "come in," all your courage comes back, and you enter with the air of a strict business man, so encouraged are you by that hearty "come in," and the voice that takes you back years and years, to the old days, where it awakens memories long forgotten. And now I will introduce to you Dr. Frank Fuller, once acting governor of Utah, and a resident of Salt Lake City for many years. Dr. Fuller was a dear friend of President Brigham Young, H. B. Clawson, and hosts of others of the old pioneers. At present he is a successful business man of twenty-eight years standing in this city. He has recently built an elegant home at Madison, New Jersey, his only son Louis, is a student at Harvard, and his two daughters are married, one living in San Francisco, the other in Honolulu. Time has dealt leniently with the doctor; he steps around like a young man; his eye is as bright as of old, and his hair, thick and wavy, but streaked with gray, seems the only indication of age. His memory of friends in Utah is undimmed and for two hours it kept the writer busy answering questions and telling of the many changes that Salt Lake has passed through, since he walked its well known streets.

R. C. Easton is in receipt of three offers, one to go with the "Bonnie Brier Bush" next season, one to sing on the Orpheum circuit, beginning August 3, and one to do the singing role in "Cori-anton," to be rendered in Salt Lake in August. He has not yet made up his mind which he will accept. JANET.
