

DESERTED BY BANKING NEWS

WEATHER REPORT.

Record at the local office of the weather bureau for the 24 hours ending 6 a. m. today: Barometer reading at 6 a. m., 25.55 inches. Temperature at 6 a. m., 70 degrees; maximum, 95; minimum, 63; mean, 79; which is 15 degrees above normal.

FORECASTS TILL 6 P. M. WEDNESDAY.

Local forecast for Salt Lake City and vicinity: Fair and cooler tonight and Wednesday. Utah: Forecast made at Denver, Colo.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

An area of low pressure is central over the northern Rocky mountain slope, while a well marked "high" is present in the Washington and Oregon coast. With the exception of two or three traces, no rainfall is reported.

TODAY'S TEMPERATURE.

10 a. m., 84; 11 a. m., 86; 12 o'clock noon, 85; 1 p. m., 89.

NEWS TELEPHONE NUMBERS.

City Editor (2 rings) 350 Business Office (2 rings) 389 Business Manager (3 rings) 380

To-day's Metals:

SILVER, Bar, 71 7/8 cent LEAD, $3.50. CASTING COPPER, 11 3/4 cents a lb.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

There was a band concert at Fort Douglas today at 4 p. m. Very large Utah strawberries are in the local market at 15 cents per box.

Contractor Holt of this city is now working on the Leanington cut-off with 28 men and 30 teams.

Dr. Ed Hewett, the dentist, has had his shoulder severely bruised by being thrown out of his buggy by a sudden jolt.

The fire in the Vienna restaurant corner of Lyon and Co. streets, to suspend business one day, but the firm was ready for business again this morning.

Emil Tinner, a well known dry goods merchant of Dillon, Mont., has assigned to M. M. Freed of this city for the benefit of his creditors. His assets are placed at $35,000.

Chairman J. C. Leary found quite an aggregation of Elks among the Shriners who stopped over in this city, and they all predicted great things for the coming convention in this city.

The commencement exercises of the state Agricultural college begin next Saturday, and continue through Wednesday following. The baccalaureate services will be held Sunday next.

Peter Loeber, justice of the peace of the First precinct, has tendered his resignation to the board of county commissioners, the same has been accepted by Frank H. Clark, who has been appointed in his place.

The train carrying the Utah Press association pulled out of the Oregon Short Line depot last night at 10:50. Many of the friends of the excursionists were there to bid them good bye and wish them luck and happiness on their journey. The first stop will be at Boise.

The owners of the Boone stone quarries, refusing to furnish material for buildings upon which union labor was employed, caused the mechanics and builders of the capital city to send to Utah for building stone, the result being that which has been reported—Boyle's building just as before—Boyle's Eagle.

Florence, the one-year-old daughter of Dr. Thomas A. Clawson, died at the home of his parents yesterday of an abscess of the brain. Friends of the little one had been suffering for some time. The many friends of the bereaved parents extend to them their sincere sympathy. The funeral was held at the residence.

There will be a civil service examination in this city July 8 and 9 for positions of inspector to act as interpreter in the Finnish and Scandinavian languages at Boston with salary at $1,000; also, for inspector of steamboat hulls at Evansville, Ind., with salary at $1,200; also, for computer with the Geodetic and Coast survey at $1,000 per year.

The junior class of the Salt Lake High school will hold its class day exercises at the Theater tonight. Those who know say that the entertainment will be one of the richest of the kind ever seen here. There will not only be plenty of take-offs on everything in general and the senior class in particular, but there will be serious features of merit.

Fish Commissioner John Sharp returned from Fish Lake Saturday night, with 750,000 native mountain trout eggs, and Supt. J. L. Walker of the state hatchery returns tomorrow evening, with $76,000 more. There is a loss of 5 per cent in these shipments, and the cost is only $50, whereas, were the shipments to be made from eastern states the cost would be $750.

Physical Director G. P. Daniel of the Y. M. C. A. is acting secretary during the absence of Secy. Axton. The board of directors will hold a special meeting this evening, when the matter of a successor to Mr. Axton will be discussed, though no action will be taken until after the receipt of his commission as chaplain in the army. It is understood that Asst. Secy. Cox of the Portland association will be Mr. Axton's successor.

Ex-Governor Frank Steunenberg, and Attorney-General Frank Martin, and State Engineer D. W. Ross of Idaho are registered at the Kenyon, from Caldwell and Boise. They are interested in the great irrigation project proposed in the Caldwell county, and have full faith that their sections of the state will become a magnificent developed country. Gov. Steunenberg says he is out of politics and has nothing to say as to political prospects.

Captain C. W. Penrose of the Twenty-third Infantry is visiting with his parents, Gen. and Mrs. Penrose at Fort Douglas, en route east from California. He is joined at Washington by Mrs. Penrose, and will then go on to Atlanta, where the entertainment will be given, and then to Fort McPherson. While in California, the captain was especially impressed with the growth of vegetation, which he illustrated in the slides of houses to vines grow up the sides of houses to

THE SWANSEA AND MOUNTAIN SWANSEA

The Swansea and Mountain Swansea Mining companies have already been mentioned in the state board of equalization against the net proceeds assessed against the names of their corporations in the list published in Saturday's "News." The Swansea company's figure for last year was $115,000, whereas this year the figure is $150,000, whereas the Swansea company's figure last year was $23,000 as against $4,000 for this year. Both companies claim that the dividends last year were paid out of the surplus of previous years on which taxes have already been paid.

The battery boys are expecting to have a regular supply of 26 horses and 18 are looked for in the next few weeks. These will be taken in hand and drilled several evenings in the week so that before the season is over the command will have animals they are acquainted with, and animals who understand the harness and evolutions. The battery has four field guns, two Gatling guns, making the regular strength, the usual six guns. The boys say that if they could only have good horses that knew their evolutions they could make as good a show as the regulars at Fort Douglas.

The demoted man who was found roaming around in the northern part of Davis county, and who was supposed to be L. E. Humphrey of West Virginia, is now in the hands of the military. The man he claims to be, Willoughby Arnett. A telegram has been received from his father in Kentucky stating that his son started for California in his health. Particulars will be given in a letter that is to follow. It is believed that Arnett knew Humphrey and secured from him his name and address, that he was found on a person whose name he took into custody. He is now being held at Farmington pending the receipt of instructions from his father.

A Salt Lake clergyman was expected Sunday evening, to preach something of a sensational discourse in the way of a searching for certain of his parishioners alleged to be backward in their church duties. However, when he saw a bevy of reporters in front of him ready to put into cold type the minutest details of his sermon, he prudently concluded to wait a while, and preached an ordinary sermon. The change of mind was the more noticeable from the fact that the preacher had said that morning he would not say anything "something warm" that evening, and advised people to bring their fans with them.

The Christian union held its regular monthly meeting last evening, in the First Methodist church. It was announced that the military excursion to Saltair next Friday would receive a handsome lady's gold watch, and the boy similarly distinguishing himself would receive a year's membership in the Y. M. C. A. The treasurer reported a balance on hand in the union's coffers of $23.90, June 1. President Stimson stated he had been unable to complete his report on the committee, but would be able to do so in a few days. It had been his intention to appoint Mr. Axton, but his becoming a chaplain in the army had prevented this. The committee will consist of three men and two women, with the president of the Christian union chairman ex-officio. For next Sunday, Mr. Stimson appointed Mr. Joseph to take charge of the morning service at the prison.

The Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company is pushing quite a number of extensions over its system. The addition to the new line from this city to Lehi has been finished, and the new line to the headwaters of the mountain in the system, with 12 wires between the two points mentioned, and pole capacity for twice that number. The company will build the new addition as far as Pleasant Grove. A line is being built from Stockton to St. John, 12 miles; the wire is now at hand for the new through service between Logan and Pleasant Grove. Then there is a building from Montpelier to Georgetown and Nounan, 16 miles, to connect with Star Valley; also, from Arco to Challis, and Prato to Shoshone. The Salt Lake connection continues to be pushed, the Thunder Mountain is being rapidly built, and is now northwest of Placerville; a line is being strung between Cedar Falls and Fort Benton; also, from Helena to Townsend. In all there are about 800 miles under construction, with 14 gangs including over 200 men at work.

ZION'S SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO. has half a million dollars to loan in sums to suit borrower on first class collateral at lowest market rates.

UTAH COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS BANK Interest paid on savings, W. F. Armstrong, pres., C. W. Madson, vice-pres., J. E. Catte, Cashier.

Collect Green Trading stamps. Trade at stores that give them. George G. Doyle & Co. Modern plumbing and home heating, 211 South State. Phone 162.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

This morning the wedding of Miss Eloise Hancock and Mortimer Senter Allen took place at St. Mark's Cathedral, and this afternoon Miss Eliza Beth Derr and Mr. W. G. Cunningham were married at St. Paul's church. Mr. and Mrs. Allen left today for a wedding home in Salt Lake. The reception of Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham a reception will be held at the home of the bride on east South Temple street.

Mrs. George A. Lowe and Miss Love have issued invitations for a reception on Thursday.

Miss Lena Preston will entertain at luncheon on Thursday complimentary to Miss Sarah McChrystal.

Mrs. George A. Richards left today for Colorado Springs, where she will stay for the summer.

Mrs. J. D. Spencer entertained yesterday at dinner in honor of Mrs. Will Preston and Mrs. Guy Thatcher of Logan.

Mrs. George Savage will leave shortly for Chicago.

Miss Lena Preston will entertain at luncheon on Thursday complimentary to Miss Sarah McChrystal.

Miss Alice Miller will leave on Thursday for the hospital, where she will visit with her brother.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The uniform success of this remedy has made it the most popular preparation in use for bowel complaints. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoea in children and is undoubtedly the means of saving thousands of lives every year. For sale by all druggists.

U. OF U. SUMMER SCHOOL.

Text-books just arrived. DESERT NEWS BOOK STORE, Successors to Cannon Book Store. Mathonah Thomas, lawyer, has removed to Deseret News building.

GARDENS RETURNING TO DESERT.

Riverion's Old Men Discouraged, Strong Citizens Leaving and Lads Going Sheep Herding—Must Have Water or the Town Will Soon be Erased From the Map.

Special Correspondence. Riverion, Salt Lake Co., June 9.—We write on a doleful strain. For the loss of respected citizens who are leaving us behind, going like Parley Hamilton to Snake river and George Washington Beakstead who will make his habitations among the Oregonians, at La Grande. Our hearts are also sore to see our wheat and oats dying out by scorching in the sun, and to see our old men discouraged, our middle aged men trying to sell out, and our young men and boys leaving to herd sheep. Grieved we feel also to see farms offered for sale at one-half the prices they could have been sold for three years ago, and no buyers. Also to see our meetings with over half the benches vacant where formerly standing rooms were at a premium. Also to see our parties, the young ladies tripping the fantastic too with each other, following the scriptural injunction, "Do ye to each other as ye would be done to." Particulars will be given in a letter that is to follow. It is believed that Arnett knew Humphrey and secured from him his name and address, that he was found on a person whose name he took into custody. He is now being held at Farmington pending the receipt of instructions from his father.

The trouble in this and the adjoining county is nearly all due to a lack of water and a lack of energy. For the shortage on our crops we grumble, but we work not; we wait for the salvation of the Lord, but we fail to respond in our own power. The young ladies tripping the fantastic too with each other, following the scriptural injunction, "Do ye to each other as ye would be done to." Particulars will be given in a letter that is to follow. It is believed that Arnett knew Humphrey and secured from him his name and address, that he was found on a person whose name he took into custody. He is now being held at Farmington pending the receipt of instructions from his father.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

HOW SNOW LOST HIS GOOD CASH.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.

It now develops that George A. Snow, who seems to have been offered of $16,000, dropped his money in Chicago instead of New York as at first understood. This new light on the affair is said to have been given out by Mr. Snow himself in his statement to the police, in which he said the money was lost in a game of faro in the room of the Auditorium hotel in the Windy City. According to the statement that Snow is alleged to have made, the manner in which the affair came about was in this wise: Snow was introduced to a man who represented himself to be a wealthy planter from the south, and to his companion, who purported to be a rich mining operator from Colorado. They induced him to join them in a quiet game of faro in one of the rooms of the hotel, by stating that a well known gambler had consented to deal with a bribe of $500. Snow, who had been in public gambling houses, consented to play, but he did not care to be seen in public gambling houses. The company repaired to the room where the outfit was prepared and the game began. The strangers affected to be playing against the dealer, but their luck seemed to be against them, and Snow was having such a hard run he was going to quit the game, but was encouraged to continue by being allowed a bribe of $500.