

ELECTION JUDGES ARE SENT TO JAIL

Colorado Supreme Court Give Six of Them Sentences Ranging from Four to Nine Months.

VIOLATED INJUNCTION ORDER.

Judge Mullins Gives Inclusive Instructions to the Special Grand Jury.

Denver, Dec. 6.—Six more election officers were sent to jail today by the state supreme court for disregarding its injunctive order at the late election. The sentences were as follows: William Reid, 8 & Barker, John E. Dixon, and John Sullivan, nine months' imprisonment and $500 fine, with costs, each; Willie E. Spencer, four months' imprisonment; Charles W. Bunch, three months' imprisonment.

Sullivan was Democratic committee man; Reid, Barker and Spencer were judges, and Dixon and Bunch clerks in the Ninth precinct, Fifth ward, in this city, the ballot box of which was opened in court last Friday, disclosing many fraudulent ballots.

The court today tried the election contempt case of the Sixth precinct, in the Fifth ward. The defendants are William Bergman, election judge; J. Kitson, election judge, and James P. Mullins and Patrick Reid, Democratic workers.

The charges are that no Republican clerk was allowed; that Republican watcher, C. H. Sanson, was violently removed from behind the rail; that supreme court watchers were not permitted to examine the registration lists and that the Republican challenger's book was taken from her.

J. Fred Roberts, one of the watchers, testified that repeaters appeared at the polls every few hours in bunches of from five to a dozen, and were allowed to vote.

The court ordered the ballot box of precinct 6, ward 5, opened and gave the contents over to two experts to examine. They worked late into the night so as to be able to report to the court tomorrow.

District Judge John I. Mullins today delivered his instructions to the grand jury summoned by him in the criminal court. He charged the jury to make a thorough investigation as to all violations of the law growing out of the recent general election.

"In my opinion," he said, "the lavish expenditure of money and the use of force in this county and state is criminal. I believe it to be at the very root of all of the crime and violations of the election laws which have accompanied our recent elections.

"It ought to be made a criminal offense for any corporation to contribute to any political party.

"It is common talk on the streets and currently circulated in the newspapers that a conspiracy exists to deprive the governorship of this state one of our citizens whom all good citizens, irrespective of politics, believe to have been honestly elected. It is further urged that the conspiracy is being carried out by the use of force and intimidation and that the conspiracy will involve the use of force and intimidation and that the members of the coming legislature.

"It is also charged that immense sums of money have been collected from the various corporations of this city and state to aid in this work. It is charged that even after the official count was completed in many counties of the state and certified to by the proper officials, agents were sent out for the purpose of procuring some one member of these local canvassing boards following in alleged minority reports with the hope that the state canvassing board could be induced to violate the law and disregard its oath of office.

"This is a matter that will tax your patience and ability, but I earnestly urge it upon you for your most careful consideration.

The prosecution closed its case against Max Schradsky, William Schrowsky, Samuel Skatkin, Max Slesack and State Pleaser, defendants in the action before United States Commissioner Capron, charging violation of the statute of the United States in preventing Republicans from voting at the recent election.

A number of witnesses testified that Schradsky, a policeman, assaulted voters, both men and women, who refused to vote the Democratic ticket, and after beating them, threw them out of the polling places, in many instances forcing them outside and confining the assault until the victims fled in fear of their lives.

Harry C. Riddle, Republican member of the election commission, testified that Schradsky threatened him in the office of the commissioner for appointing a Republican judge objectionable to Schradsky.

NO TRACE OF BANDIT HAS BEEN FOUND.

Man Who Looted Wells-Fargo Express Car Has Made Good His Escape.

SCORES OF DEPUTIES ARE OUT.

Are Patrolling Railroad—Thousand Dollars Reward Offered for Robber's Capture.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6.—Notwithstanding that scores of deputy sheriffs and police officers are patrolling the Santa Fe railroad, nearly all the way from Daggett to Needles, and the surrounding country is being searched to the remotest corner for some trace of the bandit who yesterday looted the Wells-Fargo express car at Daggett, Cal., after shooting and perhaps fatally wounding Express Messenger Evan Roberts, the man is still at large.

The first suspect arrested, a negro, who was taken into custody at Barstow yesterday, arrived in this city today in charge of officers, and has been lodged in the city jail. Wells-Fargo officials say, however, that they do not believe he is the man wanted. Several other persons have been apprehended at various places on suspicion, but it is believed that the right man has not yet been captured.

The Wells-Fargo Express company has offered a reward of $1,000 for the capture of the bandit. This offer has been supplemented by one for a similar amount from the Santa Fe Railroad company and $300 from the state. The large reward has attracted a number of persons who are searching every foot of the territory in the neighborhood of the hold-up where a man could secrete himself, and it is not believed that he can possibly succeed in escaping.

The country for miles in every direction from Daggett is a barren desert, with no avenue of escape excepting by way of the railway.

Messenger Roberts is still alive and the physicians say that he stands about one chance in 100 of recovering. He is yet considered too weak to attempt to make any identification of the man who shot him.

Asst. Supt. Pridham of Wells-Fargo said this morning that the amount of money taken from the way freight train is about $300. Several checks and drafts, including one for $5,000, were also taken, but payment on these has been stopped and the robber will hardly take the chance of making an attempt to cash them.

Another arrest was made today at Ludlow, a small station 50 miles to the eastward of Daggett, on the Santa Fe. The suspect is a white man, and it is believed by the authorities that they may have the right man. He is nearly a year or more in the state penitentiary and was seen there up to the time it occurred.

About that time he disappeared, however, and was not heard from again until he was arrested today at Ludlow. He denies any claim that he was on his way to some mines in the interior. It is said that he was formerly a railroad man and familiar with the construction of express cars, and would have known how to effect an entrance into the car from the end door, as was done.

The name of the negro under arrest in this city is Garfield Williams. Williams claims that he was on his way west with a carload of horses and had been refused the right to ride further with the horses and was making his way the best he could when taken into custody. He will be taken before Messenger Roberts as soon as the latter is able to see any one. The suspect at Ludlow is also being brought to this city for identification.

MESSENGER ROBERTS DEAD. Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 7.—Messenger Evan Roberts of the Wells-Fargo Co., who was shot by train robbers while en route to Los Angeles over the Santa Fe railroad, near the Needles, Monday morning, is dead.

To Oppose Open Shop. New York, Dec. 7.—A special meeting of the International Carriage & Wagon Workers' union executive committee has been called to adopt measures for opposing the open shop movement proposed by the National Manufacturers' association. The meeting will be held in this city Dec. 15. Preparations will then be made to send organizers into every city where there are societies of the international union and to levy an assessment on the 15,000 members of the union for this purpose. In all there are 65,000 carriage and wagon workers in the United States, and this number includes thousands of laborers.

No Politics in Navy. Washington, Dec. 6.—Merit, and not political influence or official prestige, should alone determine assignments to duty in the navy, in the opinion of Secy. Morton, and the secretary today addressed a letter to Supt. Brownson of the navy academy, expressing his emphatic disapproval of the efforts to influence the department in the assignment of midshipmen from the class soon to be graduated to certain ships.

A resolution was adopted which refused to intervene in the regular assignment of officers prepared by Rear Admiral Converse, chief of the bureau of navigation, and this, he declares, will continue to be his policy. The department will fall support of the president in his position.

MISSOURI SENATORSHIP. Maj. Wm. Warner Announces His Candidacy. Kansas City, Dec. 6.—Maj. William Warner of this city, United States district attorney for Western Missouri, in a dispatch from Washington today, announced his candidacy for the office of United States senator to succeed Senator Francis M. Cockrell.

Colorado Electors. Denver, Colo., Dec. 6.—The state canvassing board completed the canvass of the returns on presidential electors today. They show that the Republican electors received a plurality of 34,582.

A resolution was adopted which refused to intervene in the regular assignment of officers prepared by Rear Admiral Converse, chief of the bureau of navigation, and this, he declares, will continue to be his policy. The department will fall support of the president in his position.

MORRISON MURDER CASE. Butte, Mont., Dec. 6.—The case of Mrs. Elizabeth Morrison, who is charged with the murder of Richard Finnegan, was given to the jury this afternoon and up to a late hour tonight no verdict had been reached. Mrs. Morrison is charged with first degree murder, conviction of which crime carries with it a death sentence.

HAMMOND, TRAIN ROBBER. Contrary to Expectations He Was Not Arraigned. Philadelphia, Mont., Dec. 6.—Contrary to general expectations George F. Hammond, the self-confessed train robber, was not arraigned today on the charge of murder of Engineer Dan O'Neil. For some unknown reason Northern Pacific decided not to press the murder charge at this time, although the statement is authoritatively made that Hammond will eventually be tried on the charge of murder. Hammond was arraigned today on the charge of grand larceny and

BEBEL ANALYZES GERMAN BUDGET.

National Debt During the Year Has Increased One Hundred Million Dollars.

BUT HE IS NOT UNANSWERED.

Von Buelow Denies that Germany is Spending More on Army Relatively Than Other Nations.

Berlin, Dec. 6.—Herr Bebel, the Socialist leader and the keenest critic of the government at all times, analyzed the budget in the reichstag today. Secy. of the Treasury von Stengel, he said, had sketched on Saturday the deplorable financial situation of the empire in terms so true that he regretted the French custom could not be followed and the speech be posted throughout the country as a ministerial declaration of the position into which the country had been drawn by the government's policies, the national debt increasing $100,000,000 during the year.

Why, then, should the army be increased? Why should the navy be increased? Why should immense sums be sunk in the colonies? Why should these and other policies that together formed the so-called "world policy" be carried forward on an enlarged scale when the budget corresponds with the Russian conditions? If the "world policy" is essential to Germany as pursued in former years, why expand that policy by loans that mortgage the empire's future and lay permanent burdens upon the industrial activities of the country?

Herr Bebel, who spoke for about three hours, discussed the details of the appropriations, deducting therefrom that on works of general public utility the government was parsimonious, while on "glory policies" it was generous at the cost of going into debt.

Chancellor von Buelow, who had for the most part sat impassive throughout the speech, though he did now and then bite his finger tips restlessly or nervously smooth his hair, replied to Herr Bebel.

The chancellor agreed with Herr Bebel in the statement that it is a great error to think that the Socialists will profit thereby, adding: "There is further reason why the governments of all the great powers are maintaining their present peace policy."

Referring to Herr Bebel's description of the internal conditions of Russia, Count von Buelow remarked: "When Herr Bebel warns us over Russian autocracy he condemns himself without knowing it, for the manner in which he laments it over his own party is a reproach to the Russian conditions that so greatly displease him. The order of things he wants to introduce with us would lay Russian despotism in the shade."

Taking up the case of the German fishing vessel Sargol fired on by one of the warships of the Russian Baltic squadron, and other incidents, Chancellor von Buelow said the German government promptly took steps to get satisfaction and all justifiable demands were immediately met without difficulty.

The chancellor expressed his inability to understand why the Socialists took such a bellicose attitude toward Russia in this manner, and said: "Particularly in the Socialist camp a lively feeling for the 'matted fist' is manifested."

Von Buelow thought a belligerent state can scarcely avoid treating neutrals as the Russian squadron had treated the Sargol.

Turning to the trial at Kronenberg of persons charged with smuggling into Russia literature of a nature which gave offense to the government of that country, the chancellor said the Prussian minister of justice would give a detailed explanation in the course of the trial, but he would remark that the mistakes committed at that trial rested upon different opinions in judicial theory between Russia and Germany.

The fact remained clearly proved that the Socialists were deliberately trying to discredit their views in Russia for the overthrow of the government. Discussing the anti-German feeling in Great Britain, Count von Buelow reiterated that the purpose of the German navy extension was purely defensive.

"I can not conceive," he continued, "that the thought of an Anglo-German war is seriously entertained by the reasonable people of both countries."

The emperor, Count von Buelow added, had approved the plan of ruling German Southwest Africa through a civil governor.

Returning to the subject of military expenditure, Count von Buelow denied that Germany was spending relatively more than any other great nation. "A country that spends $750,000,000 yearly for spirituous liquors," he said, "can spend $300,000,000 as an insurance premium for national safety."

Turning to Southwest Africa, Chancellor von Buelow said the Hereros' power of resistance had been broken. The uprising of the Witbols and other southern tribes was a new and severe blow, but the chancellor expressed confidence that Gen. von Trotha would do these matters up by necessary means in order to prevent further uprisings against German rule.

Count von Buelow denied the stories that famishing Hereros had been shot down upon coming from the desert to surrender. "As regards it as our duty," the chancellor said, "to make a recurrence of such uprisings impossible for all time, I believe the natives must be prevented in future from having firearms. I also believe that native capitalists must be abolished."

Sufficient troops, the chancellor said, must be kept permanently in German Southwest Africa to crush future uprisings in the bud.
