

SOCIAL CHAT

The week has been a gay one in social circles, chief among those events which have contributed to its liveliness are the affairs given in honor of the visiting officers and their ladies at the Fort. On Monday a reception was held for the officers in the afternoon at the house of Col. Lockwood, on Tuesday Mrs. Morrow entertained at a tea for Mrs. Baldwin and Mrs. Drum; on Wednesday Mrs. Lockwood gave an afternoon card party, and in the evening occurred the hop, which was made specially elaborate in their honor.

Military emblems and the national colors predominated in the decorations at the post hop. Flags were everywhere and palms and flowers added to the attractive appearance. The receiving party numbered the members of the visiting party, Col. and Mrs. Lockwood, Captain and Mrs. E. M. Blake, Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Moody. Music was rendered by the regimental band, and the event was in every way delightful.

Mrs. Frank Morrow was hostess at a delightful tea on Tuesday given in honor of Mrs. Baldwin and Mrs. Drum. The rooms were bright with holiday red and green—Christmas bells, red candles and shades and red decorations being artistically arranged with festoons of green. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Lockwood, Mrs. J. E. Woodward, Mrs. Sturges, Mrs. Jamerson, Miss Lillian Woodward and Miss Katherine Judge.

Mrs. W. S. McCormick entertained the bridge club at her home on Wednesday.

The Sewing club met with Miss Abbie Wells on Wednesday.

On Tuesday Mrs. F. S. Cantlion was the honored guest at a reception and family reunion given in celebration of her birthday by her seven sons. The reception was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Cantlion, which was made bright with flowers and greens for the occasion, chiefly the gifts of friends, a large number of whom called. In the evening the members of the family joined in a pleasant reunion at the same place.

About 70 guests were present to enjoy the luncheon given by Mrs. J. E. Dooly at her home on Wednesday. The rooms were decorated in red, white and green with the holiday colors predominating, the small tables at which the guests were seated having each a crystal candlestick with red candle surrounded with a wreath of holly, while red carnations were on the sideboard, and red shaded candelabra on the mantel.

Captain and Mrs. Sturges entertained at a buffet supper on Thursday night, about 25 guests being present.

Mrs. Jay Rogers was hostess at a pleasant card-party yesterday, a number of her friends spending an enjoyable afternoon. The rooms were prettily decorated, and refreshments were served.

THE LARGER OUTSIDE CITIES

OGDEN.

The most brilliant club event of the season occurred Tuesday afternoon when Mrs. J. S. Corley entertained the members of the "Coterie" and a few friends at her elegant home on Jefferson avenue, the occasion being the Christmas meeting of the club and the fourteenth annual anniversary of the organization of the club. A very enjoyable musical literary program was carried out. One of the special features being a talk by Mrs. Perkins on art and its achievements in Utah. The musical part of the program consisted of piano solo, Miss Nellie Henderson; vocal solo, Mrs. G. E. Farnley; vocal solo and negro dialect reading Mrs. Thomas Maloney. Mrs. Corley entertains the "Coterie" each year at their Christmas meeting, and this year she proved a more charming hostess, if possible, than on any previous occasion. Her home was a profusion of decorations in keeping with Christmastide. After the rendition of the pleasing program, the doors to the dining room and library were thrown open and those present beheld a beautiful artistic sight. Tables were spread for 14 in each room. At each place was a small cake in which was burning a small wax candle, through the center of each table were the words "Coterie" done in evergreens and cut flowers, and the other table decorations were likewise place of each guest at the bounteous repast was designated by a prettily hand painted clipping holder, the design being mistletoe sprays, entwined around the word "Clippings." During the serving of the repast toasts were given. Mrs. Harriet Emmerson, president of the Coterie was toastmistress. To the toast "The Coterie," Mrs. Ardie Bigelow responded; "The Quasi Little Men of Japan," Miss Josie Kim-
