NATTY OUTING COSTUME.

Many charming styles in natty street suits have been introduced in modern, none more trim and snappy than this pretty little cream-colored costume, accented by color contrasts of blue. The skirt is the new killed model, finished with a blue velvet binding. The coat a graceful development of the pony-coat model, fitting the figure quite closely and leaving but an inch of its length to touch the hips. The broad collar falls over an inner vest of royal blue velvet, while the cloth-covered buttons are placed upon wide, blue velvet-bound buttonholes. The hat is a soft cream felt, with a royal blue tasseled band.

Mrs. Some have the best wishes of many friends.

WOMAN ELECTRICAL ENGINEER FOR PHILIPPINES.

Mrs. R. E. Tutt, probably the only woman electrical engineer in the United States, reached this city Wednesday with her daughter, Miss Margaret Tutt, on their way to the Philippine Islands. When seen at the Rainer Grand hotel by a Post-Intelligencer reporter, Mrs. Tutt said:

"I became interested in the electrical work about eleven years ago after I had moved from my home in Billings, Mont., where my father and brother were mining engineers to southern California. At that time there were very few of the streets of towns on the coast lighted by electricity, and seeing a chance to make a little money, I applied to the city of San Pedro for a franchise for an electrical plant and system. This was granted, and I installed successfully, and resulted in my being asked by the people of Long Beach to do the same thing for them. I took the matter up and finally arranged for a system to be operated from one central station and to supply the two towns named, and Terminal Island. The electricity was transmitted through a submarine cable, the first to be used for transmission of electrical power.

"At first I had a man in charge of the work, but finding that I could handle the work myself to better advantage, I let him go and took charge myself. The work that I have on hand now, and which is partially completed, is the installation of two large power plants near Prescott, Ariz. One, which is known as the Arizona One, company, will have a capacity of 6,000 horse power and the current will be transmitted to the mines in the vicinity at a voltage of 35,000. The other, The Prescott Power company, will furnish 10,000 horse power and the transmission line will carry about 2,000 volts. I do not undertake any of the construction of the plants, except those in which I am interested myself. I have, for this reason, more interest in the work than any one whom I could employ and never have any trouble in carrying everything through to a successful end."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

In Woman's World.

All the contrivances of the dressmaker's art used for the trimming of bodices are zealously brought out in the elaboration of the fussy blouse. Conspicuous are the fancy waistcoat of darned lace or cloth of gold brocade. The simulated waistcoat is taking on a dozen or more forms, high, low, narrow, wide, straight or cross-over; but the waistcoat suggestion is always apparent. When the waistcoat appears on elaborate suits it is invariably of silk, satin or fine cloth embroidered or braided. On walking gowns cloth of a contrasting shade or texture is used. Narrow waistcoats are most effective of elaborately embroidered bands, narrow gaiters or silk pique-menterie. Oriental embroideries and European peasant colorings and Indian work are much employed. In walking suits, waistcoats and cuffs are often made of embroidered linen or pique. Big buttons close the washable waistcoats; sometimes, however, gold or jeweled buttons are preferred.

Women's clubs abroad have become an established institution, and to be a member of one of the smart clubs is socially necessary. They afford a most delightful place to lodge for women running up to town for a few days' shopping or recreation. She needs no chaperon and is even permitted to invite her men friends for an occasional luncheon or afternoon tea. Here the up-to-date matron or modern bachelor girl may gather to chat or gossip and not only drink tea but smoke, for scarcely a popular club is without its smoking-room, furnished with all the ease and comfort of the most exclusive masculine domicile.

The Ladies' Army and Navy, numbering a membership of some 4,000, is one of the best known English clubs. Princess Christina is president, and she with her two daughters, Victoria and Louise, are frequently seen lunching in the grillroom without any formality.

The Ladies' Automobile club, located at Claridge's and the Lyceum are both most sumptuous in furnishing. The Lyceum faces Green Park in Piccadilly, and has already won international fame for its art and culture. In fact, branches of this most estimable institution are being established all over the world. Almost equally well known and exclusive are the Ladies' Empire Writers' and Pioneer, with innumerable others.

Of course, as in all institutions of this sort, there are the superficial, "risque" with the bridge crazed and gold enthusiast. But fundamentally they affect the open sesame for woman's usefulness and growing activity politically and socially.

The Country club, with headquarters in Holland Park, is most reasonable in subscription, with accommodations of the highest standard. One of the delightful features is the permission given members of a year's subscription to furnish their own apartments, so that even though they may not "put up" at this most delightful club they may always have a room in readiness for themselves and guests.

The cooking is delicious, and the staff of servants, uniformed in red in the morning and gray in the afternoon, is most efficient. This is one of the few clubs where smoking cards and billiards are not to be found. For two guineas a week one may procure residence and board, with all advantages afforded.

There is no intermingling of sexes abroad in clubs, not because the gentler sex is objects, but the masculine idea of club life is to get away from petticoats.

Although women are making these wonderful strides in club life, it is doubtful if they ever shall reach the state of delightful camaraderie prevalent in the clubs for men. Even the broadest and most advanced sentiment has never quite eradicated the antique nature of occasionally showing her claws under her velvety paw.

NOVEL USE OF RIBBONS.

An unusual feature of this handsome beige-colored cloth dress is the novel use of the wide beige-covered satin ribbons as trimmings. They cross the front of the bodice, clasp at their intersection with an amber-colored buckle, then continue under the side panels of the long-skirted bodice, reaching around to the back and knitting in long streamers. The lacing is repeated upon the sleeves, while the underskirt of beige-colored chiffon over white silk is trimmed with five rows of deep-toned beige velvet ribbon that matches the velvet-covered buttons grouped very effectively upon the front and back panels of the bodice.
