BOSTON CONSOLIDATED.

Stewart Ore Body Opened in 1870—Mill Was Destroyed.

In 1870 the old Stewart ore body of oxidized gold ore—the oxidized capping of the sulphide deposit of the Boston Consolidated—was discovered. Considerable prospecting was done by the engineering and mining journal.

The Peabody ore body has been opened up for about 330 feet along its strike and is about 240 feet wide, its thickness ranging from 35 to 65 feet.

The upper channel has been developed for about 400 feet along its strike and is 40 to 45 feet wide. It varies from 30 to 40 feet in thickness.

The sulphide deposits is opened up for three adits viz, the Armstrong No. 1, 2, 300 feet; the Peabody, 2,600 feet long and 165 feet higher; and the top level, 140 feet higher.

The ore is mined by a system of square block caving. The timbers are framed in Oregon and when they are received ready for use.

TRADING WAS GENERALLY DULL

Opening Prices Inclined to Drop in Spite of Higher Prices for Americans in London.

DEMAND FOR UNION PACIFIC.

The Bank Statement Was Very Disappointing But Closing Strong and Active.

New York, Sept. 8.—Opening prices of stocks today were inclined to drop in spite of higher prices of Americans in London, the prevailing tendency was revived only by a few small gains.

The trading became dull while awaiting the bank statement. Prices receded on the showing of a deficit of $6,577,500 below the legal reserve. Heavy supporting orders were distributed later in speculative market leaders and there was a strong rebound.

The demand for stocks was very small but sufficient to clean up the available supply at various levels and the list was gradually lifted upwards.
