belts the place for which one is bound. As a result, we have an increasing number of attractive summer wraps, garments that may be thrown on over pretty pinks and blues and pale mauve tints, foulards, cotton stuffs, pongees and linens and muslins. Although these now necessary wraps are of every kind and description—whites and champagne shades perhaps predominating—the one with which we are likely to become most familiar is a glorified edition of what we once knew as the linen "duster". It is true that only women of large means can afford the more perishable costumes, but I am ready to make a radical-sounding statement that isn't radical at all. It is economy to wear thin traveling gowns! It is easier to be immaculate in light clothes than in heavy! Witness the wash tub! The less expensive materials—chambrays, linens, zephyr gingham, mohair, seicillans, samurai, pongee—may be made up into costumes suitable for the train. In taking long journeys, it is, of course, necessary to prepare for possible changes of the weather. But how sensible to do this by carrying a change of wrap, light or heavy? I advocate light traveling costumes even for extensive trips. Laundry can be taught to keep up with one by express. As for those who travel frequently from suburb to city, making a daily trip of it, there is no question as to the economy and cleanliness of the new fashion. Salad of Lima Beans—Soak a cupful...

Special Correspondence. NEW YORK, April 29.—Miss Ellen Thomas, who has been a resident of this city the past three years, takes her departure for her home in Ogden Monday, April 29. On Thursday evening last, at mission headquarters, she was given a farewell soiree by Prest, and Mrs. McQuarrie and the other members of the Utah colony were invited. The invitations being general, a big turnout was the result, for Miss Thomas' friends are legion. She came here to study voice culture and has made great progress in music, the concert stage being the goal for which she has fitted herself during her years of study, but her labors have not been confined to the divine art alone—cheerfully she has assisted in the Sunday school, Mutual and Sunday services, being organist for all three. No matter how urgent her social calls have been, her duty to her Church has always come first—and she has well earned the title of the "Little Missionary". Miss Thomas leaves the Utah contingent here with the best of wishes for her future success. All who know her will watch with interest her progress. She will stay a day in Niagara and a few days in Chicago—on her way west. During the week of May 6, Miss Leigh will be seen at Keith's on Fourteenth street, her route on the circuit bringing the sketch—"Kid Glove Nat." to this theater. She will be assisted by the author, Edward Fisher, who plays the opposite male part. Miss Leigh has been playing at all the outside houses in Keith's circuit, during the winter and the sketch has proved a success wherever seen. That she will repeat her success in the city, there is small doubt. Mr. Ashby Snow, the Salt Lake attorney, who has been at the Park Ave. hotel during last week, leaves today for the west. On Wednesday, Mrs. McQuarrie and her mother, Mrs. Dandel Seegmiller, with Elder H. E. Hatch, will go to Washington for a few days to meet Prest, McQuarrie, who has been holding conferences for the last few weeks in the south. Mrs. McQuarrie goes for rest from her long confinement at home during the winter in the care of her little daughter Alice, who was so severely burned last November, and who is now only able to be left in the care of friends. It will be Mrs. Seegmiller's first visit to the capital since her arrival in September of last year. Elder Hatch will visit Washington with Prest, McQuarrie, also Philadelphia and Albany, before sailing for Europe where he will finish his mission. Thursday morning Miss Emma Lucy Gates returned from her trip to North Carolina and Washington, D. C., while in the latter city she was the guest of Miss Barratt, daughter of Kate Waller Barratt, president of the Florence Critchfield mission. Miss Gates has greatly benefited by the change and is busy now preparing to sail on May 7 for Berlin. Artist Fairbanks, of Salt Lake, who was once a well known figure here, is with us again and will do some extensive copying from some famous friends. Mr. and Mrs. Sears have been so long identified with the Utah colony that their absence will be keenly felt. They will return in the autumn. Mr. Sears has had an amount of work to do that calls him back. The rest and change will benefit both and their friends wish them good luck on their summer trip. Channing Pollock and his wife sailed yesterday for Europe on special business connected with Collier's Weekly, expecting to be absent three or four months. Mr. Pollock says his European letters will appear in the "News". Mrs. Roche and her daughter, Mr. Pollock's mother, are at Lakewood for a few weeks. Mrs. Pollock has been ill and the change was advised by her physician. JANET.

pictures in the Metropolitan museum, Rosa Bonheur's "Horse Fair" perhaps being his biggest order, the Commercial club having commissioned him to execute this work. Elder Fairbanks is always a prominent worker here in the Utah people and his sojourn here is regarded with pleasure by all. About two weeks ago Miss Margaret Miller had the misfortune to sprain her ankle and she has been an invalid ever since. She is now on the road to recovery. Miss Miller's home on West Twentieth street, No. 431, is a pleasant stopping place for all west-ern friends, the hostess making every-one feel he is the welcome guest. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moyle who are here on their wedding trip, are guests at the St. Denis, tenth and Broadway, and have been entertained by some of their friends when not sight-seeing. They will leave about the middle of the coming week. At the "Actors Fair" which is now under the "Great Fair" beginning May 6, at the Metropolitan Opera House, Miss Blanche Thomas, with several actress friends, will have a booth. Miss Thomas is quite active in the work, and is soliciting friends for attractive articles with which to fill her table. Mr. Stuart M. Kohn, the promising young lawyer, has the offer of a partnership with Dolphin Dehnas and McPhee of San Francisco, the two coming to Harry Thaw. The offer is a flattering one and Mr. Kohn is taking it under advisement. The contract reads for three years, at the end of which time he will be free to choose another firm or remain with them or open an office for himself. By his friends it is considered a most unusual opportunity, and is worthy of considerable thought before deciding. Mr. and Mrs. Kohn have a charming apartment on West Ninety-third street, where their many friends are always made welcome. Mrs. Emily Y. Clawson and her daughter Josephine, arrived in the city today and were warmly greeted by their relatives, Mrs. Easton and Miss Gates. Mrs. Clawson will be in the city for a week or 10 days sight seeing before sailing for England where she goes to meet her two sons. Monday, the 28th, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sears leave for Salt Lake to spend the summer with relatives and LINEN FROCK WITH SHORT BOLERO. To those who are preparing betimes their summer wardrobe, this pink linen frock is among the suggestions. The skirt is adorned with a wide bias band arranged to give an overskirt effect, and a little cape-like bolero of lace is worn over the simple linen dress. The lace is white, of Venise pattern, and is outlined with little platings of the pink stitched on both sides. A burnt leghorn hat loaded with pink roses, and a white parasol completes this toilette.

THIS WALKING SUIT SHOWS THE GIBSON SHOULDER. A fine English worsted in gray and brown check is chosen for this smart little walking suit. The skirt is fourteen gored and banded with bias folds of the material. The coat is of Eton shape, with the broad extended shoulder known as the Gibson. The fastening is on one side on the front, accomplished with two large brown satin buttons. Brown satin faces the shawl collar and finishes the cuffs, and as an added touch of smartness, a brown bow tie and golden brown kid shoes are worn.

A SYMPHONY IN GRAY. Gray lansdowne and gray lace compose this charming costume. The shade is that pinkish gray known as platinum, and lace and fabric match exactly. The bodies is of the lace with Japanese sleeves of the lansdowne, this, according to true Japanese fashion, extending from the neck to the elbow without a dividing seam. The front panel of the skirt is also of the lace. This and the front panel of the waist bordered with narrow platings of the lansdowne. The skirt is fitted with tucks about the hips, and has a tucked-shaped flounce edged with broad bands of the lace. The hat is a burnt leghorn, mushroom-shaped, adorned with gray and blue morning glories.

card party to be given next Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Della J. Richards at the home of Mrs. Cullen. Mrs. Frank Swenson entertained her Sewing club yesterday. A reception will be given next Tuesday afternoon in honor of the dedication of the Leonard Memorial Home for Nurses, the affair being under the auspices of the St. Mark's Hospital Aid association. Yesterday afternoon the last regular meeting of the Ladies' Literary club was held for the season, with the current events and literature section, the session being chiefly of a social nature. A musical program was given by Miss Emily Jessup, Miss Pearl Rothchild and Asher Cowan, after which tea was served and an informal social hour passed. Mrs. R. A. Hasbrouck entertained the Daughters of the Confederacy this week. The Daughters of Utah Pioneers met at the Lion House on Wednesday afternoon and continued the study of the "Conquest of Peru". The last meeting for the season of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be held next Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Grant Hampton. The Cleofan met with Mrs. John McVicker on Tuesday the hostess giving a talk on "The Higher Education of Women". It was the last meeting of the season. In Women's World. The heavy traveling dress for summer is no longer a convention that must be deferred to, writes Mrs. Osborn, the authority on fashions, in the May Delinctor. The fashionables have been pleased to discard it. The un-fashionables may well follow suit. This year the woman traveler, if sensible, will fall in line with the fashion and be seen no more in cumbersome traveling gowns. She will wear thin dresses. The love of comfort and cleanliness are not alone responsible for the sweeping change that is taking place in this feature of woman's dress. Many of us in the country nowadays, when dress in pink or blue or white as they choose, put on an attractive coat of silk or lace, and come up to town ready gowned for whatever they may wish to do. So today it grows more and more the custom not to dress especially for traveling, but to dress appropriately, as Agony Columns in British Papers. THE longest series of "agony" advertisements on record is that of which a schoolmaster named Wilton was responsible. He had evidently been robbed of his daughter and money, and began advertising in 1851, and continued till 1870, when either his death put an end to his search, or he discovered that for which he had sought so long. Wilton was evidently a man of education, with an extensive knowledge of foreign languages, for he advertised in English, French, German, Latin, Spanish and Italian, and occasionally he used other. His state of mind was reflected in his advertisements, his moods alternating between threatening, imploring, warning, and occasional humor. The latter moods are exhibited in the following advertisements: "Caution—All persons assisting in secreting my daughter, Alice Jane Wilton, 12 years old, are liable to seven years imprisonment.—E. J. Wilson, Ennis, Ireland. (March 15, 1859.) "Hercules malheureux qui le suis. I ain't got no money.—E. J. W. (Dec. 22, 1862.) Although the Express cannot lay claim to an advertisement with such a lengthy record as Wilton's, its "agony" column has contained many romances, chief among which was the mystery surrounding a woman who for five years regularly made use of two columns of page 2. Who she was, what she was, and matter what the weather outside. The snow is porous enough to admit of air circulation, but even a gale of wind without would not affect the temperature within. It is claimed by the natives that when the wind blows, a snow house is warmer than in a period of still cold. I could see no difference. A heavy snow igloo is, however, more comfortable than one that has been used, for newly-cut snow blocks are more porous. In one that has been used there is always a crust of ice on the interior which prevents a proper circulation of air.—Dillon Wallace, in the Outing Magazine. What a Little Paper Did. It may be asked what a man who from his size belonged in B company at West Point was doing in the eighth division among the tall men of D company, writes Gen. Morris Schaff in the Atlantic. It came about in this way: My second year at West Point, owing to an increase in the size of the battalion, the overflow of my company, B, and the various other companies had to be reorganized. I was known as the angle, which threw me with John Asbury West of Georgia of D company. West and myself became very close friends, and that we might continue to room together, just before the battalion was formed in 1860 at the close of the encampment for division into companies, he suggested that I stuff some paper in my shoes to lift me up into the flank companies. Thereupon we inhaled a good share of a newspaper in each shoe, lowered my trousers to the extreme limit to hide my heels, and to my heart's delight, the result was, in counting off the battalion, I fell just inside of D company. And on that bit of paper in my shoes all my life has hinged; for had I should in all probability have graduated in the engineers and the stream of my life would have run through different fields.—New York Sun.
