FOR ELABORATE EVENING WEAR.

Somewhat more elaboration than designers have been wont to bestow upon evening dresses in the past few seasons distinguishes garments of this type for fall and winter 1908. The best of these are loose fitting, almost cae-like in their voluminousness, and developed in the finest materials the purse can afford. With the soft slinky materials high in favor the light weight soft panne velvet will be used to a great extent, and its trimming will consist of handsome braids, passementeries and laces disposed in the most effective manner so as to show off their beauty to the best advantage.

Luncheon at her home on Tuesday for Miss Kate Allen of Park City, who leaves shortly for the east, the table having for a centerpiece a mound of pink and white asters and the place cards being done in good luck emblems.

Mrs. Arrasmith entertained the Regimental Bridge club at the post on Tuesday, the prizes being won by Mrs. Potter and Mrs. Harker.

CALLING COSTUME OF THE NEW MODE.

Velvet and velveteen take their place this season as extremely high-style fabrics for dressy toilettes of the two and three piece kind—that is, a princess or two-piece dress with a coat of the same material. Broadcloth of self-color is frequently used as a trimming, and sometimes one piece of the toilette is made of this material. Again, a plain velvet will make the skirt and bodice, while a fancy pile fabric of the same toning will make the coat and form the trimmings on the dress. The pictured toilette is of such a character, in the fashionable shade of smoke gray, with coat trimmings of silver soutache and chemisette of white Irish crochet. The hat is in the same shade as the vest.
