SOCIAL GAT

On Monday night a large affair took place in the ball given by the Capitol Hill Building club, formerly known as the J. B. W. H. club given for the purpose of furthering the erection of a state building on Capitol Hill. It was in the nature of a character affair and many were dressed in costume, with countless characters represented. The hall was strung with hearts, and with the many unique and handsome costumes of the guests a brilliant picture. About $100 were the profit of the affair, and in every other detail it was alike successful. Among those present in costumes were: Hal Cummings, "Snow-bell," Alberta Barton, "Goddess of Liberty," Mrs. Fred Graham, "Marguerite, from Faust," F. C. Graham, "George Washington," Mabel Bumel, "French Soldier Girl," Mrs. B. Madison, "Martha Washington," Mrs. Byron Burton, "Spanish Dancer," Alice Cummings, "Columbia," Leander Hunter, "Uncle Sam," Mrs. F. J. Husbands, "Colonial Maiden," F. J. Husbands, "Daniel Boone," Louise Hagman, "Priscilla Moulton," Josephine Dawson, "Turkish Lady," R. S. Folland, "Dutchman," Hazel Foote, "Gipsy," Miss Stella Poulton, "Spaniard," Wanda Pratt, D. C. Young, Jr., "Tramp," I. Barton, "Dutch Yeoman," Alice Wehby, "Dutch Farmer," Miss Mae Alder, "Girl of the Golden West," Harriet Whitehead, "Colonial," Rhoda Larson, "Liberty," B. E. Dorius, "Uncle Sam," M. Kate Young, "Mary Jane," Emma at Spanish Dancer, "Girl," Ivy Rantz, "Mrs. Mary Wilcox."

Another delightful affair of Monday night was the valentine party given at the Ladies' Literary club by members of the Girls' Friendly society. The hall being bright with festoons of red hearts, strings from the chandelier to the four corners, and a large number being present. The guests were received by Dean and Mrs. Benjamin Brewster and Miss Sarah Spalding, while the refreshments were in charge of Mrs. M. L. Ritchie, Miss Uglow, Miss Elizabeth Groo and Miss Mary Hill. Miss Maud Williams, with her orchestra, furnished the music for the evening. The chaplains were the honorary associates of the society, Mrs. W. C. Jennings, Mrs. J. Walcott Thompson, Mrs. Overfield, Mrs. G. D. Moore, Mrs. G. H. Van Arman, Mrs. L. D. Gordon, Mrs. J. J. Froughall, Mrs. Archibald Reid and Miss Cayley.

On Monday Mrs. W. H. Tobias and Mrs. W. H. THE OVER-BODICE OF EMBROIDERED NET.

Many of the gowns being planned for after-Easter receptions have these little bodices, which, like boleros, set over the high-waisted skirt. These bodices, as will be seen in the photograph, are very plainly built and carry out the simple, long lines of the skirt. This gown is of petunia cloth and is fitted faultlessly over the hips, the folds trailing gracefully about the feet. The little bodice is of heavy corn net embroidered with petunia pink motifs and brose and copper threads. The hat is in the bronze tones and has two pink roses under the brim at one side.

IRISH LACE IS ALWAYS IN FASHION.

The rich character of the heavy hand-made Irish laces make them—like the costly points—always correct in style. The Irish lace blouse of this season is mounted over a white slip of chiffon or thin silk, and, of course, it has long sleeves to the wrist. No matter how handsome a blouse one may own, if it has elbow sleeves it had much better be laid aside to await a more propitious season, for just now the long sleeve is imperative. This lace blouse looks quite simple at first glance, but a closer study will reveal the vandyked motifs of baby Irish lace, which are set into the top and bottom of the front and across the top of the sleeve. The contrast of these finer motifs with the very heavy pattern of the blouse adds greatly to the value of this lace garment.
