GIRLS LEARN MANLY ART TO MANAGE HUSBANDS

Chicago, Feb. 20.—An Evanston club has gone on record in favor of instruction for girls in the art of managing husbands.

The club's faculty was organized by an overwhelmingly affirmative vote on the proposition.

Resolved, that girls should be taught to box.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, woman justice of the peace, introduced the resolution.

Aside from the immense advantage accruing to wives in handling their husbands, the faculty thought that such preparation would be good training for housework.

Another suggestion was the teaching of the art of attacks by holdup men.

One caused a murmur of dissent by suggesting that resolution to read: "Taught to defend themselves from violence in a ladylike manner."

This was voted down.
