OUR LORD'S DAY.

A correspondent writing from Indian Valley, Idaho, asks: "Why do we, as members of the Church, observe the First day of the week as the Sabbath, when it is plainly stated in the Ten commandments that we should keep the Seventh day?"

quaintance. We want them to hear our singers and musicians, to see our children and learn what Utah does for their education, and, in fact, to find out everything about the State and the people here. A great deal of misunderstanding exists, owing to the activity of the enemy who is always busy sowing tares. It can be removed only by giving the world an opportunity of seeing Utah as it is, at close range.

MOSES THATCHER.

The "News" gladly accords space to the following communication from "A Friend": "To the Editor—As there now remains no journal in Salt Lake City, through which a Democrat may hope to obtain a hearing, may I ask the Deseret News as a non-partisan paper, to allow space for the few following thoughts, suggested by the passing of Moses Thatcher?"

naturalism, and they are losing hold of their young folks. We beg to differ with The Monitor on this. The fact is that the great majority of the Latter-day Saints are fervently devoted to religion. They attend their meetings, study the word of God, pray, fast, give of their means for missionary and other purposes, and many of them spend years in the missionary field without financial remuneration.

WATCHING THE REPORTS.

Never were the pulse beats of an Old World monarch watched with more solicitude by the general public than the scanty bulletins concerning the health of Mr. Harriman are in the business world. Harriman controls millions. Somebody's just calculated that recent sales of bonds and accumulations of railroad earnings must total about $30,000,000, representing the available balance at Mr. Harriman's command.

The "Effect of the French Revolution on Religion" is described by Dr. Paul Tschackert, of Göttingen. Dr. Sharpless presents the history of the "Society of Friends." Other articles deal with Bible subjects such as "Ecclesiastes," by Kleinert; "Eden," by Rogers; "Elijah," "Elisha," "Enoch," all by Von Orelli; "Ephraim," by Nestle; "Euphrates," by Rogers; "Ezekiel," by Von Orelli; and "Galilee," by Guthe, as well as many others on ethical and scientific lines.

FOR THEOLOGICAL STUDENTS.

The fourth volume of the new Shaft-Herzog Encyclopaedia of Religious Knowledge has been issued by the Funk & Wagnalls company. This is a great and reliable work which all interested in theological subjects will find of immense value as a work of reference.

fly to the uttermost parts of the earth and be at rest. Gifford Pinchot's output of speeches is almost equal to that of James J. Hill. President Taft got lost in the Lynn woods. Under den Lynn den, so to speak.

FLowers for Grandma.

Mrs. Louise Coulson. One bright, sunny afternoon in the loveliest month of the year—May—Grandpa and little Edith went out for a long pleasant walk. Grandpa wanted to go to the public park, as he was old and feeble, and knew that if he felt tired he could sit down on one of the many benches placed at convenient intervals under the shade trees and rest.

creedly made; the great manly heart he laid at her feet, the kiss he pressed on her priceless, unblemished lips that sealed their betrothal. Again he stands at the holy and sacred altar of marriage.

MEXICAN COLONIES.

A correspondent of the Herald, Mexico City, dated Chihuahua, July 25, has this to say about the Mexican colonies founded by Latter-day Saints: "The colonies of Galeana (district) located in the northern part of the state are without doubt the most prosperous in the country. They have lived there but 15 years and at the present time they produce an enormous quantity of wheat and flour and export fruit and cheese to the United States."

dead. The little coffin was brought in all robed in spotless white. The precious angel is placed in the party casket. Grandpa and grandma stood by an open grave and saw the bosom of mother earth receive their darling. Ah, now they are bound by closer ties, of heaven and earth; and looking into each other's faces, lives and hearts, they with one accord bow in humble submission to God's will and decree, not without hopes. They wend their way more closely united. They had an interest on earth; now they have heaven guarded in heaven. One by one the years roll on, their other children are roaming the earth in different fields of labor; grandpa and grandma have grown old together, their children and we come back to little Edith, skipping from flower to flower, intent on gathering flowers. He thinks it time to go home. His afternoon reflections have been both pleasant and profitable—pleasant that through all the long years of shadow and sorrow the companionship of his youth has ever been true and loving helpmeet, still the companion of his old age; ever the same loving devoted wife. Their life is deeper and more sacred than in the heyday of their youth, and in sweetest trust, with complete assurance of a long and useful life, they will help for each other, and in addition, others, ever bowing to the will of him who rules the universe, they are now waiting their way home, waiting at the pearly gates for the Savior and Master to enter into life everlasting. Let us hope that little Edith will still continue.

Flowers for Grandma.

Gathering flowers for grandma. With fingers nimble and fair, loving devoted wife, their life is deeper and more sacred than in the heyday of their youth, and in sweetest trust, with complete assurance of a long and useful life, they will help for each other, and in addition, others, ever bowing to the will of him who rules the universe, they are now waiting their way home, waiting at the pearly gates for the Savior and Master to enter into life everlasting. Let us hope that little Edith will still continue.
