

INTERURBAN TO PROVE PROMISE Salt Lake Capitalists Agree to Commence Construction Within Six Months.

NOW SEEKING RIGHT OF WAY C. B. Lang, Representing Syndicate, Making Trip of Inspection Through Utah County.

(Special to The News.) Provo, Oct. 5.—That Provo and other Utah county points may soon be connected with Salt Lake City by an interurban electric railroad is the indication of events now transpiring in this city and county.

C. B. Lang, representing Salt Lake City and other capitalists interested in the proposition, was in Provo yesterday on a trip of inspection, and he promised that the parties who have agreed to finance the project will commence work on the electric road within six months. Applications for franchises to the city councils of the various cities through which the line will pass will be presented at an early date, and it is promised that work will be commenced within six months after the right of way is secured, as all the money needed is available, and there will be no delay for the purpose of getting capital.

LOOP AROUND LAKE. In a few years when the west side of Utah lake becomes more thickly settled (and this section is now rapidly becoming populated) a loop will be constructed around the lake, for the convenience of the people and also to give the Salt Lake people an opportunity to make trips to this beautiful section of the state and enjoy the delights and hunting on the lake, and the pleasures of the resorts which are bound to be established on the shores of the lake following the construction of a railroad.

A REMARKABLE RECORD. Chicago & Northwestern Carries 27,000,000 People Without a Fatality. The announcement is made by the Chicago & Northwestern Railway that for the year which ended June 30, 1909, 27,000,000 of passengers were carried over its rails without a single fatality, and it is difficult to comprehend the significance of this statement without the aid of the most illuminating illustrations.

For example—the number of passengers carried by the Northwestern during the period above mentioned was more than all the railroads in the United States carried in the year 1850. This number of persons is seven times as great as were included in both the federal and the state armies during the Civil war; twenty times as many as were in Xerxes army at the invasion of Greece, generally supposed to have been the largest number of persons ever gathered together in one place at one time. It is a third of the population of the United States, yet each one of these 27,000,000 passengers entrusted their safety to the Chicago & Northwestern railway, and the railroad safely accounted for every precious life placed in its care.

The population of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts and Indiana approximates 27,000,000 persons, and statistics show a greater number of fatalities each year in these states as the result of accidents to persons who are pursuing their usual duties, than indicating that travel on the passenger trains of the Northwestern is attended with less hazard than pursuing the ordinary everyday vocations of life.

This record is not obtained by accidental good fortune, but is the result of a fixed policy on the part of the company for systematic and liberal expenditure wherever such outlay can add to the safety and comfort of the traveling public.

ELECTRICIAN IS BANKRUPT. Albert J. Garraux, an electrician, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal court yesterday. His liabilities are placed at $1,733.22, of which $1,967.78 is unsecured. The assets are said to be $531, which is largely exempt. The largest creditor is the Internountain Electric company, to which is owing $554. His hearing will take place Oct. 7, at 10 a. m., before Commissioner Baldwin.

FAMILY HISTORIES OF GREATEST VALUE The meeting of the Genealogical society held yesterday afternoon opened with prayer by Bishop Joseph C. Christenson. The president of the society, Athlon H. Lund, was pleased to see so many present, and believed there was an awakened interest in genealogical research and temple work. He said, "The saints should realize the importance of salvation of our dead, for without our dead we cannot be saved."

"We have a library of about 1,400 volumes and much genealogy can be gathered here. The society has agents who are skilled and work regularly." Encouraged all to become life or annual members. Elder Anthony W. Ivins, said, "The project is one of the most sacred duties we have in the salvation of our dead. Realizing the importance of this, we have established this society with a genealogical library. Some of our saints have spent time and money in going to England, and have not accomplished as much as could be done here in our home library. Thousands of names have been taken from these books."

"Men have been impelled by a spirit they cannot understand to spend years in compiling family genealogies, and if we choose we can enjoy the benefits of the research." Elder Duncan M. McAllister, recorder of the Salt Lake temple, spoke on record keeping for temple work. He said: "I can not express myself too strongly on the importance of keeping as perfect a record as possible. You can not be too careful. The identification of the individual depends on the accuracy of the record. Forms have recently been prepared by the board showing the approved method of compiling family genealogy for temple work. These forms are simple and easy to understand."

Elder McAllister gave valuable instructions and suggestions, and closed by urging all to avail themselves of the benefits of membership in the Genealogical society.

President John H. Winder said: "I wish to congratulate the workers in the Genealogical society on the work they are performing. Since they have taken up their energetic labors, our temples are crowded. Many are taking up the records of their dead who have never before been interested. I am impressed with the importance of this. Much work has been done, but there is a great work yet to do. Have your records properly compiled, before coming to the temple. I hope the Genealogical society will not cease its labors. Two of our brethren, Elder Joseph F. Smith, Jr., and Bishop Christenson, are going east to study the conditions of the libraries and societies, and I feel that much good will result from this visit. It has also been decided that a magazine will be started which will be of great benefit to the saints and hope that the support of this will be given. Subscribe now. I urge the brethren and sisters engaged in this work to go on."

Elder Joseph J. Grant said: "We have magazines, but one of the most necessary is a historical and genealogical magazine. This, the board of the society has decided to publish. This is a step in the right direction. Believe me this magazine will be of the greatest benefit to the saints. The genealogy of our forefathers is worth its weight in gold. The magazine will be exchanged with that of other societies throughout the world. I will not only subscribe for it, but furnish money, if necessary. I hope that everyone will subscribe."

President Athlon H. Lund said: "This society has been called to assist in this work, and they have an auxiliary organization called the historical division of the Genealogical society, and Mrs. Susa Young Gates will speak a few words to you today."

"Mrs. Gates said: 'It has been decided to take up the study of genealogy in the Church schools of Salt Lake, Provo and Logan. Lectures will be given on the subject, and it has been decided to have a badge for members of the society.'

"The design chosen is that of the medalion of the Prophet Joseph. At President Lund's suggestion, this badge will be in the shape of a heart, with the profile of the prophet in the center, surrounded by the words, 'The hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers.' This design will be about the size of a five-dollar gold piece, and in gold will cost $2.50 each, silver $1 each."

LIP AND LEG DISEASE. Important Circular Received Today By Chief of Local Office. Dr. F. E. Murray, chief of the bureau of animal industry in this city, received an important circular from the department at Washington this noon, on the lip and leg ulceration (necrobacillosis) of sheep. The circular in brief states that the ulcerative condition which affects the lips and legs of sheep does not spread from animal to animal in epidemic form like foot-and-mouth disease, but certain sheds, feed lots, corrals, or pastures become affected with the germs causing the disease, which enter the tissues when the mouth or leg is injured by lacerations, stubble, rough forage, etc., and set up disease. During the winter when snow is on the ground and the weather is cold that the surface of the snow becomes hard and crusty, thus making grazing very difficult, the disease may spread very rapidly and easily, owing to the numerous scratches received upon the nose and feet becoming infected with the blood and bits of scab which drop from the affected sheep.

Lip and leg ulceration is caused by the necrobacillus, and as the skin of the legs, muzzles, and lips are involved in many cases, the name of necrotic dermatitis (necrotic inflammation of the skin) has been applied. It quite frequently happens that the ulcers and sores on the outside of the lips extend into the mucous membrane lining the inside of the lips, as well as the other parts of the mouth, the lesions of the mouth may occur through licking the ulcers on the legs, which accounts for the disease being also termed necrotic stomatitis (necrotic inflammation of the mouth).

The appetite usually remains good, but the animals feed with difficulty owing to the sensitiveness of the affected parts. In some cases the scab extends from the lip over the cheeks being between the ears, and at times a mucopurulent discharge appears, which adheres to the nostrils and together with the swollen condition of the surrounding tissues, hinders a more or less complete exclusion of the air passages, resulting in labored breathing upon exertion. In some cases the lesions extend into the mouth, producing erosions on the inside of the lips, on the gums, and on the dental pad of the hard palate. These lesions, which are of a spongy consistence and present a warty appearance, are especially noticed on the lambs.

Lesions on the legs as a rule coexist with those on the lips, hence the origin of the term "lip and leg ulceration." The sheep at this time will show some lameness, as better results will be obtained by attacking the outbreak as soon as discovered than can be expected if the disease is permitted to spread among the herd or penetrate deeper into the tissues of the affected parts. One of the first steps to be taken in the treatment is to separate all the sheep that are in any degree diseased from those that are healthy. If only a few animals are affected the best results are obtained by removing entirely the scabs and shreds of tissue from the diseased areas and washing them once daily with a solution of carbolic acid or coal tar dips permitted in the official dipping of sheep for scabies, the dip being used at a strength one-fourth greater than that prescribed on the label for scabies. The disease responds quickly to any of the common antiseptic solutions.

Experience has shown that sound sheep may be safely pastured on land that has been generally been occupied by animals suffering from lip and leg ulceration if the winter's frosts have been allowed to intervene. The germs of the disease seem to be effectively subdued by the winter's frosts, which have become contaminated one season may be considered safe for their customary usage during the following season. The pens, corrals and sheds, however, must be carefully disinfected to prevent the recurrence of the disease, as these facilities will retain their virulence under suitable conditions in and around the sheepfold for several years. The walls, racks, and troughs should be sprinkled with a solution containing one pound of pure carbolic acid to four gallons of water, to which enough lime has been added to make the sprayed area conspicuous. The manure and a portion of the surface soil of the corrals should be removed and the ground sprinkled with the above or a similar disinfectant.

During the afternoon Judge Humphrey attended the state fair in company with Judge C. S. Zane, formerly of Illinois, who was appointed chief justice for Utah by President Arthur in 1883. Judge Humphrey rendered the opinion in the famous "beef trust" case, which called down the criticism of President Roosevelt, but which was approved by the United States supreme court. The judge expressed his admiration for Salt Lake City and for the possibilities for the growth of the city and state. He left for the east at 6 o'clock last evening.
