

BRADFORD WINS IN THIRD WARD

Spirited Contest in Primary for Nominating School Board Candidate.

MRS. HORNE QUILTS THE RACE

Advised Her Friends to Consider the Welfare of the Children First in Casting Their Votes.

Before the nominations closed in the Third ward convention for a candidate for the board of education, in the high school gymnasium last night, what promised to be a five-cornered fight was simplified and the names of but four candidates were presented to the convention. Even so, only the withdrawal of two of the candidates after the second ballot prevented the balloting running far into the night.

This fight was undoubtedly the most spirited of the contests for candidates for this body. In no other precinct has the geographical factionalism entered to the extent it entered this one. North, south, east and west sections of the precinct were aligned each against the others and each with a candidate to present. From some of these divisions, which have in the past been represented on the board, came those whose fairness to those less fortunate led them to espouse the cause of a candidate from some other section. These were, however, exceptional cases.

Following the selection of Oscar Moyle as chairman of the convention and Ben R. Hollingsworth as secretary, a motion was made and adopted providing that the candidate receiving the nomination must receive a majority of all votes cast. In view of the bitterness of the contest, this move made it appear that the selection of a candidate was to be a long drawn out affair.

To discount this time-consuming method, the resolution was adopted limiting the time for nominating and seconding speeches to three minutes. This resolution was fought by the friends of Mrs. Alice Merrill Horne, but without success.

NOMINATIONS MADE.

Mrs. Horne was the first candidate placed in nomination. William J. Newman's name was the second up, followed by Gus S. Backman and Robert H. Bradford in the order named.

Three sets of tellers were appointed by the chair, the secret ballot having been chosen as the method to be employed in voting. On the first ballot, Mrs. Horne received 35 votes, William J. Newman 107, G. S. Backman 64 and Robert H. Bradford 76. The second ballot showed 117 the disposition on the part of the voters to trade and the result announced varied little from the first. Mrs. Horne arose after this ballot and withdrew her name from the race, in which she was followed by Mr. Backman. Mrs. Horne declared in withdrawing her name that she had no desire to advise her friends to throw their support to either particular opposing candidate but wanted them to use their judgment, keeping in mind the best interests of their children, who were, after all, the ones most vitally interested.

On the third and last ballot, Mr. Bradford received 167 votes and Mr. Newman gained one over his initial ballot, making 108.

AMUSEMENTS

Colonial—That Salt Lake thoroughly appreciates the high standing that Nazimova occupies in the artistic world as an actress, producer of plays, and manageress of her own theater in New York, was attested by the great audience that greeted her at the Colonial last night. Professors, students, critics and advanced thinkers along dramatic lines who love their Ibsen, as well as the regulation society first nighters, were out in force, and the folding of the play of "Little Eyolf" was followed with that wrapt intensity, rather than outbursts of applause, which indicated the highest degree of interest.

Ibsen's works have been called studies in pain. "Little Eyolf" certainly fits in with that description. It is full of gloom, subtlety, depth and tragic shocks, but the justification of all this, Ibsen's claim, is found in the invariable lesson at the close, when the father and mother, who child has been drowned, who were drifting away from each other, and who were both unbelievers, groping in vain for a meaning for their bereavement, find it at last in learning and seeing that their duty lies towards aiding the poor and unfortunate, to assume a share of the burdens. The theme is that of human responsibility and it is treated beautifully. Involved as it is, and depressing as its passing effects are.

In the part of Rita, Nazimova is given an opportunity to show her powers along the quiet and unexpressed lines. She rose to no great heights of acting, yet her delineation of the restless, feverish, dissatisfied mother, jealous of her husband's love for the child, and most of all in the one vital scene where she learns of the child's death, stamped her anew as an artist, full of magnetic, subtle and powerful attributes. She is panther-like in the grace of her sinuous movements, and in her bearing, her manner and her individuality with which she invested her peculiar role, she was unapproachable.

The supporting cast was ideal. Mr. Tynan, as the husband, played with the care and good taste that always distinguished him. Miss Esmond, as the young half sister, was thoroughly artistic. Miss Berkeley in the role of the rat wife, contributed a rare bit of study in the art of make-up, and the others were equally effective. The staging was in all ways admirable, and the music, selected by Nazimova herself, finely rendered by the orchestra, was a feature.

MOTION TO QUASH ARGUED.

Grounds Cited Before Judge Ritchie in Walker Contempt Case.

Motion to quash the citation to appear before the Third district court and show cause why the defendants should not be punished for contempt of court in the Walker contempt case was argued before Judge Ritchie this morning. This case grew out of the departure from the state of Althea Walker, Clarence Walker and Margaret Walker Smoot while an order issuing from the court for them to appear and testify in the Walker will case was in effect.

One of the grounds upon which the motion to quash is based is that the special administrator of the estate was wrongfully appointed and another is that the case is now pending in the federal court. Other grounds are also cited.

Boys and girls, don't forget that your Christmas story must be mailed to us not later than Saturday night Dec. 3.
