FOR UNIVERSAL CONSCRIPTION

What Distinguished German General Advocates for the United States.

YOU CAN'T COUNT ON MILITIA

War is a Natural Function, a Law of Nature, Is but a Struggle For Existence.

New York, Dec. 5.—Another distinguished foreign military authority is the guest of New York City today. He is Gen. Ernst von Reichenau, the German army's chief authority on artillery. He comes to America to witness some government tests at Sandy Hook as the representative of the Ehrhard company, manufacturers of guns and ammunition. This concern, which labors officially under the title of "Rheinische Metallwaaren Und Maschinenfabrik Dusseldorf," is the chief German competitor of the Krupp works.

Gen. Von Reichenau comes with war's alarms: "The United States is not prepared for war, but I have an idea, is it not so?" If I should speak, I would get into the papers and at home make trouble for me. But I can say that America is not prepared for war. And that is bad."

WAR WITH JAPAN.

"As to a war between America and Japan, I cannot speak, but I have an idea, is it not so?" If I should speak, I would get into the papers and at home make trouble for me. But I can say that America is not prepared for war. And that is bad."

The general continued: "Gen. Wood was perfectly right in asking Congress to give him money with which to keep a large reserve army of several hundred thousands at his beck and call. I would go much further; I would urge universal conscription here, as we have in Germany. So you will see, in my opinion, it is a necessity. The time for disarmament is not approaching. Will the time ever come when we cease to be a nation? No. Well, a great many people think civilization and peace are one and the same. It is just the opposite. The power that makes the nation strong must arm herself. A poor man does not need protection; it is the rich who must defend his goods. So with the nation. War is the law of nature. We see it all around us in the struggle for existence, the struggle for life itself. Where will it all end? Well, each nation must arm herself up to her capacity. If a man strikes me, I would not mind one more blow, but I would fight with both hands and both feet. So will the nations always prepare to fight with all the power they have. They must."

CANT COUNT ON MILITIA.

"It is necessary to prepare for war in peace. You can't count on militia. You must have an army, so mustered and equipped that it can be mobilized on the frontiers in the shortest possible time. After mobilization, the militia nation must not wait to strike; she must strike immediately. The Japanese didn't wait after the Russian war started. Gen. Moltke said, 'I would like to know what he would do if war were declared, that he would press an electric button, and that if he had to fight after that he would consider himself a bad soldier.' The remark of H. H. Rogers, on his return from Germany, that the American army was employing tactics 20 years old, Gen. Von Reichenau did not agree with. He explained that the American army, what there was of it, was up to date, but that on account of its lack of size, it could not practice those maneuvers which made a large army most effective and which were necessary in these days for the successful conduct of war."
