

AT PORT TOWNSEND.

Famous Indians Among the Hop Harvest Migrants.

A WOMAN'S FACE TORN OPEN.

The One-Armed Gambler's Wife-Imports and the Duty Thereon-Death of Two Children.

PORT TOWNSEND, Oct. 9.—The split about Port Townsend is now swarming with Hop harvest migrants. For several days the canoe fleets of the returning hop-pickers wending thither have dotted the bay, and over 12,000 are now encamped there. They are leaving much of the money earned on the hop fields with our traders. Judge Swan, the greatest living authority on the tribes from the Columbia river to Behring strait, went through this tented city yesterday. He says: "There are canoes there from Bella Bella, Fort Rupert and Cowichan, on the east side of Vancouver island, and on the mainland; Kiyookah, Mita, Kwaikwaka and Whina, natives from the west coast of Vancouver; Makahs, from Cape Flattery and Quillayate, on the coast of Washington; and Chilians from Elwa and Chilian bay, on the straits of Fuca."

Among the Kiyookahs the judge recognized their great war chief, Sedakani, now a broken down, feeble old man, totally blind. "Sedakani," says the judge, "was once a man of powerful physique. He is now accompanied and cared for by his two sons, Frank and Benjamin, also men of note in their tribe and all well known in Victoria. Sedakani has about eighty of his people with him. His father, Wikanihsh, was a famous chief mentioned by Cook, Vancouver, Meares and other early navigators, and was contemporary with Magellan and Callum, the great chiefs of Norika. Sedakani's son Benjamin, has made for his father a chief's staff or cane elaborately carved, representing incidents in the life of the old chief. This is kept as a sacred family relic and would not be parted with."

Benjamin will be an exact copy of this staff for Judge Swan, who will send it to the National museum.

These Indians will all leave for their homes as soon as the weather clears up.

EXPLORATIONS OF THE PATTERSON.

The United States coast surveying steamer Carlisle F. Patterson arrived here this afternoon on her way to San Francisco from her season's survey of the southern Alaska coast. The Patterson left this port, going north, on the 10th of last April, and arrived at Cleveland passage, a few miles above Cape Fairway, on the 7th of April. From this point she made surveys of the coast about Admiralty island, Seymour canal and Hokkaido bay, where the season's work terminated. The season was generally rainy, with but two weeks of fine weather in July, and this was of perfect beauty. The scenery of the trip, especially Admiralty island is spoken of by the officers as most grand and sublime, and the glaciers of Hokkaido bay were beautiful and interesting.

The Gedna, now on the coast of Oregon, will next season examine the coast survey. The Patterson started her survey on June 29, and returned to San Francisco on September 29. She stopped at Fort Stanton, coasted at Departure bay, and made a short stop at Victoria. The officers of the Patterson are as follows: H. B. Mansfield, commander; lieutenants, E. Dorn and A. N. Wood; ensigns, C. H. Beecher, McDonald, Slocum and Faust; surgeon, H. I. Percy; engineer, G. D. Strickland; draughtsmen, H. F. Ford, J. G. Smith and L. Sandford, and a crew of fifty-five men.

Captain Francisco, the pilot, will transfer tonight to the Pinta, which will sail for Sitka tomorrow morning at 4 o'clock. There is now a considerable fleet of United States vessels in Port Townsend bay—the gunboat Pinta, the revenue cutters Tush and Wolcott, and the Patterson. The Tush will sail for Sitka tomorrow morning, the Patterson for Seattle tomorrow morning.

A WOMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Mrs. Peter Epison, living about three miles from Sequim bay, was not injured by a falling tree, as was reported yesterday. She was assisting her husband getting out logs to build a cabin. While rolling a large log, it went to the end of the pole, and in such a way that the other end flew violently up, catching Mrs. Epison under the chin, and tearing up the entire cheek and side of the face to the scalp. The jaws were laid bare and the mouth exposed. Dr. Victor J. Capron, the city, went to her relief as soon as possible, but could not reach her until twenty-four hours after the accident, when she was almost dead through loss of blood and suffering. Dr. Capron returned about midnight last night and says that he left her comfortable.
