

WELLINGTON'S COURTS.

It is in King County, Judge Osborn Says.

THE CORNER IS ON THE SUMMIT.

Liquor Dealer Cannot Recover for License—Six Chinamen for Deportation—An Old Hop Suit.

King county extends to the summit of the Cascade mountains, and includes within its boundaries the town of Wellington. To hold otherwise would do violence to the manifest intent of numerous statutes defining county boundaries, and would add to the confusion of the county boundaries of the legislature extending back to the time when Washington became a territory after the government carved it out of the immense empire which at that time passed under the name of Oregon. This is the effect of a decision rendered by Judge Osborn yesterday in passing on the suit of Samuel Brown vs. the county commissioners, to recover $200 paid on a license for liquors at Wellington.

As the basis of his action Brown set up a mutual mistake between himself and the county commissioners, in believing that Wellington was in the county of Oregon. The purpose of the action in submitting the case to Judge Osborn stipulated that Ferguson's house, mentioned in the complaint, was situated one and one-fourth miles west of the summit of the mountains and seven miles east of the south line of township 27 north, range 11 east, produced by an intersection with the summit, and seven miles east of the north line of township 27 north, range 11 east, not surveyed by the government. The survey of township 26 has not been accepted. The difficulty and uncertainty as to the eastern line of the county from the language of the legislature in describing its boundary. The lines are described partly as "up the main channel of Green river to the summit of the Cascade mountains, thence northerly along said summit to the southeast corner of township 27 north, range 11 east, it being a point due east of the northeast corner of township 26, range 11 east."

In passing on this point Judge Osborn said: "If the southeast corner of township 27 were situated on the summit, there would be no difficulty in this matter, but it has been ascertained that the corner is about fifteen miles west of the summit. To determine whether the legislature intended the northeast corner of the county to be at the summit or at the southeast corner of the township we must ascertain the fact, if possible, from all legislative acts affecting the boundary."

The opinion then takes up the act of the Oregon legislature in organizing Thurston county; then Pierce county, then King and Island, in 1852 and 1853. Next comes Snohomish county, organized by Washington territory in 1854, and all these use the expression "summit of the Cascade mountains" occurs. Judge Osborn, in commenting on that fact, says: "Where monuments or fixed points are used courses and distances must yield to the legislature. In describing the eastern boundary of King county, has designated as a permanent and fixed monument the summit of the Cascade mountains. This is the only necessary means of ascertaining the highest elevation of that range. If, then, the summit of the mountains must be followed as a permanent and established natural monument, the legislature certainly did not intend that the summit should be departed from to find a point fifteen miles west of that summit without giving some point of deflection from the summit west of the range."

Applying the above reasoning to the decision of Judge Osborn holds that in paying for the license Brown received exactly what he paid for, and has no cause of action against the county.

OFF FOR THE FLOWERY KINGDOM.

Six Celestials Bound for the Land of the Peacock Feather.

Chinese with bogus certificates are in bad luck in this city just now. One of those recently arrested by United States officers for being illegally in the country, six have been ordered deported. Four of them are in the custody of the court yesterday. Commissioner Emery disposed of the cases of Wong Ah Linn and Wong Chung, and Judge Hanford sentenced Ah Look and Ah Tuck, who were brought from Tacoma early in the month of May, to the county jail for ten days. The four Chinese are the ones who entered the country with forged certificates from British Columbia. Wong Ah Linn and Wong Chung were charged with violating a law, where they will remain until ten days, the time in which to appeal, shall have expired. They do not care to wait, but seem desirous to catch the next steamer from Tacoma and have their difficulties over. One of them took a hopeful view of the situation, and even offered a bribe to the deputy United States marshal, to be taken in China immediately, for accompanying the order of deportation was a further order that execution be suspended until the Chinese be held to await the action of the United States grand jury, which will pass upon a criminal charge against them.

The other two Chinese compelling the westerly are Linn Sing, formerly cook on the revenue cutter Walcott, and Soy John. They were taken to Tacoma yesterday morning. Linn Sing is the man who has been arrested a term in the penitentiary at Walla Walla for smuggling. Ah Look and Ah Tuck are very abundant and would give a great deal to be out of their present predicament. One of them claims to have property of value in this city, which appears to think he has lost all he earned. They are like the lot of having paid for tickets, and then have them not only prove valueless but the cause of a deportation. Nevertheless they steadfastly refuse to say anything about the certificates, not even indicating where they came from.

UP FOR THE THIRD TIME.

Suit Against an Ex-Sheriff for Unlawful Levy on Hops.

The suit of the Newburgh Exchange Bank of Milwaukee against John H. McCann, on trial for the third time in the United States court yesterday. The action involves some $8,000 damages claimed by the bank for an alleged unlawful levy on its basis of hops consigned to A. F. Lawrence & Co. of Milwaukee, in December, 1894. At that time Mr. McCann was sheriff of this county, and levied upon the hops under an execution for $8,000. The bank sought to set aside a judgment for $3,000 held against Lawrence & Co. after the levy of the bill of lading for the hops was assigned to the bank, which had been done by the action of the first Justice Judge Hanford granting a non-suit, but the case was sent back to the United States court on appeal. The second Justice Circuit court of appeal granted judgment for the bank, but the case was sent back to the United States court on appeal. The second Justice Circuit court of appeal granted judgment for the bank, but the case was sent back to the United States court on appeal. Glass' Damage Suit.

D. B. Glass, who jumped from the second story of the West Street house at the time of the fire last October, and who was seriously injured, has filed an amended complaint in his damage suit for $2,500 against J. The general land office has canceled the homestead entry of Stephen Garner for lots 1 and 7 and the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, section 9, township 27 north, range 7 east, for conflict with the Northern Pacific grant. This leaves the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, section 10, township 27 north, range 7 east, included in the general entry tract.

CAUGHT BY THE LAW AT LAST.

Miller, the Swindler, Turns Up in Kentucky as a Bunco Man. J. H. Miller, alias W. W. Marston, alias W. H. Mattson, bunco man and swindler, who, with the assistance of his dashing, handsome wife, obtained several good-sized bills of exchange from merchants in this city January 31, 1894, but who escaped prosecution owing to the law about getting goods under false pretenses, has at last fallen within the clutches of the law. Paris, Ky., on three charges of buncoing. He was arrested June 5, under the name of George A. Taylor, and had it not been for T. N. Valline, one of the Pinkerton detectives, would have stood trial without his record coming before the public.

W. A. Pinkerton, the great thief-catcher, in a letter to the chief of police at Paris, said that there was no doubt that the prisoner was none other than J. H. Miller, a dangerous criminal from Portland, and one who should be put under heavy bonds to keep him from forfeiting them.

In giving Miller's record the Oregonian says that he was convicted at Portland and sent to the penitentiary for twelve and a half years, but Gov. Penney pardoned him after six months in jail. Continuing, the Oregonian says:

The court, after referring to the fact that the township corners were in an unknown wilderness, not to this day surveyed by the government, concludes that the legislature intended the northeast corner of the county to be at the summit of the Cascade mountains, at a point due east of the northeast corner of township 26 north, range 11 east."

Applying the above reasoning to the decision of Judge Osborn holds that in paying for the license Brown received exactly what he paid for, and has no cause of action against the county.

THE DEFENSE CLOSED.

COURSE OF THE FATAL BULLET.

The Page case will in all probability be concluded today, and before another twenty-four hours shall have passed the defendant will know his fate, unless the jury dissent. The defense rested its case yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at which time court adjourned to this morning, when the counsel for the state will take up his testimony in rebuttal. The principal portion of yesterday's session was taken up by expert testimony on the uses and effect of hasheesh, supposed by the defense to have been the drug used on Page the morning of the shooting, and also as to the position a man must be in to produce a wound similar to the one which caused the death of Fraser. To defense had in the court room bottles of hasheesh and absinthe and a human pelvis. The testimony of the different physicians called was, generally speaking, alike, the only difference being the quantity of hasheesh required to make a dose and the length of time for it to take effect. It was on these points that counsel for the state claim to have made a vital point in support of their case. They claim that a person, after being under the influence of hasheesh, would not remember what transpired during that period and can tell or write what occurred to him while in that condition.

At the conclusion of the expert testimony the defense called by calling five witnesses, one after another, who had formerly lived in Mitchell, S. D., and who testified to Page's conduct while there.

The usual large crowd was in attendance during the day, and with the exception of some portions of the expert testimony, where words of ten letters and about seventy syllables were used, was very attentive to everything said and done. An amusing little incident happened when the charges of buncoing, a mixture of absinthe and hasheesh, he looked around for some glasses in which to prepare his mixture, and finding none asked Clerk Hughes for a pair of glasses. Mr. Hughes quietly opened his drawer behind his desk and handed him a pair of smoked goggles.

Mrs. Fraser was in court as usual, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Mallard. Page sat in his accustomed place, surrounded by a number of friends and his sister, who has been with him since the beginning of the trial.

More Cases of Drugging. The first witness called by the defense at the opening of the morning session was H. B. Dunsberry, formerly of the Abbott house. He knew Johnson, who in November, 1894, drugged the witness, and gave it to him in the Mitchell saloon.

On cross-examination witness was asked if he was known about town as "Dusey," and he said he was called "Dusey" by some people.

Detective Cuddehe said he asked Johnson after the shooting if he knew any gambling going on the night of the shooting, and Johnson said he was drinking for drinks. He then asked Johnson if the men were gambling for money, and he said they were not.

M. A. Winters, owner of the marble hall under the Bailey building, was asked whether he saw Johnson in Vancouver drug a man, beat and then rob him, but the question was ruled out.

What McDonald Was Hired for. Jack McDonald, ex-deputy sheriff, testified that Stolder, the state witness, said to him after the shooting, in answer to a question whether there had been any gambling or dice throwing going on, that there had not. The examination continued: "Have you been employed by the defense in this case?" "I have not."

"Are you not employed on this case in any way?" "I am not. I am employed by Mr. Hager on a matter having no bearing on the case."

"Why did you call on Stolder at the Northern?" "To have a talk with him on the case, as what he knew might be of some benefit to me in case I should be employed."

"Did you say to Stolder that now that Fraser was dead he could have no bearing on the case?" "No, sir; I did not."

Effects of Absinthe and Hasheesh. Dr. Shannon said he was called to see Page at the city jail on April 23, and found him lying on the bunk. He called to him, and he got up. He said he was sick at the stomach, dizzy and felt generally shaky. The doctor examined him and found his muscles twitching, eyes rather glassy, and found his temperature 100 and pulse 120. The next time he saw him his temperature was 98. He saw him next on the following Saturday, and his pulse had dropped to 100, but his temperature had only dropped half a point. Several things might have produced the condition of Page. A large dose of opium would have produced such symptoms, but not the amount in four or five cocktails, unless the person was uncommonly susceptible to alcohol. Strychnine or hasheesh might have caused the condition, but small quantities produced exhilaration or slight intoxication, but it taken in large quantities would produce tremors, general exhaustion or insanity. Hasheesh and absinthe together would cause general stupor and great weakness, together with sickness.

On cross-examination witness said Page did not say anything to him about what had happened, but that he had generally felt sick at his stomach, felt weak, had nausea. Some of the symptoms made it appear that the patient was suffering from alcoholism, but there were other symptoms, such as salivation and temperature, that are not tributary to alcoholism. The cross-examination continued:

"Could not a man's pulse increase greatly when excited, the patient knowing he had died a death would the night before?" "It may, but that is according to the temperament of the patient."

"Did you detect any odor about the patient?" "I did not, but that is according to the temperament of the patient."

"Would you prescribe for the defendant if you had smelled anything?" "I might."

NO MOURNERS THERE.

Strange Scene at the Funeral of Vina Kelly.

A QUARREL IN THE FAMILY.

The Burial Is Postponed and the Coroner Makes an Investigation Which Disproves Charges.

The unusual spectacle of a church filled with people, casket before the altar covered with flowers, the minister and choir ready to proceed with the ceremony, but no mourners in attendance, occurred at the Market street Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon.

This was the outcome of a peculiar combination of circumstances following the death of Vina Kelly, the 11-year-old girl spoken of in the Post-Intelligencer for the past two days. Last night the casket was straightened out, and if something unexpected did not happen, the funeral will take place at 9:30 o'clock this morning from the rooms of the Seattle Undertaking Company.

Coroner Askam intended to hold an inquest over the remains yesterday morning, but a post mortem examination revealed the fact that death was due to pneumonia. He then decided that there was no need of an inquest and signed the death certificate.

The funeral services had been arranged to take place at the Market street Presbyterian church at 10 o'clock in the afternoon, but were changed to take place at 1:30 instead. About 12 o'clock D. S. Kelly, the father of the girl, was at the undertaking rooms and had a talk with Mr. Koepfl, the undertaker, about the funeral. He said he was not feeling well and possibly might not be at the services. In the meantime the church had been prettily decorated by the friends of the dead girl and also many beautiful flowers were sent to the undertaking rooms to be placed on the casket.

At the appointed time the hearse with the casket in the back arrived at the church and was placed before the altar. People kept coming until there were about forty or fifty present. Rev. Samuel J. Kennedy, the pastor, arrived and took his place in the pulpit. It was discovered that not a member of the mourning family was present and no one was able to account for their absence. Minister and congregation waited and waited, but no one appeared. The undertaker could not offer any explanation, but felt certain that the time for the funeral was understood by all. Finally, after waiting until nearly 2:30 o'clock, Mr. Kennedy offered a prayer, the choir sang a selection, and owing to the peculiar condition of affairs it was decided best to take the remains back to the undertaker's and have a funeral some other day.

Word was sent to Coroner Askam that the relatives had not appeared at the funeral services and that there seemed to be some talk about the cause of death. This caused the coroner to remark that it was disgraceful to have a family trouble cause so much publicity through the death of an innocent young girl. Suddenly the coroner grabbed his hat and remarked that he would settle the question once and for all time regarding the death. Then he went to the undertaking rooms where the body had been returned and removed the lungs, stomach, uterus and heart. With the exception of the lungs, which were badly congested, every organ of the body was in an absolutely perfect condition and utterly refutes the impression given by the father to Coroner Askam Thursday afternoon that his child was emphysemic.

Some time after the body was taken back to the undertaker's, one of the ladies who had been at the church met David Kelly, a brother of the girl, on the street, and he said that there had been a mistake about the time for the funeral, as he understood it was to take place this afternoon, but his father wanted the time changed to this morning at the Seattle Undertaking rooms.

Coroner Askam told Mr. Koepfl last night that he would hold himself responsible for the record of the cause of death and hoped the poor mother would not interfere this morning without any further trouble. Rev. S. J. Kennedy finally consented to make another effort to conduct the services.

THE APPEAL IS NO STAY.

Council May Go Ahead With Masell's Trial Regardless of It.

The impression that the appeal taken by the City Commission against the council from Judge Langley's decision denying the writ of prohibition to restrain the council from hearing the mayor's charges, would serve as a temporary stay of proceedings for the trial of Masell for the views held by the city. City Attorney Steele said yesterday afternoon that he did not think the appeal prevented the council from proceeding with the trial. There is little doubt that the matter will be brought to a head soon and what action the defense will take to stave off the proceedings will be watched for with interest.

Mayor Phelps said yesterday that he had not been able to find anything in the city charter that indicated that Joshua Kellogg, who was appointed to fill temporarily the position left vacant by the suspension of Masell, could not act.
