

NONE SAW DURRANT.

Fifty-nine Students Who Attended the Lecture Testify.

THEY PROVE NOTHING AT ALL

Except That the Person Who Answered Durrant's Name at Roll-Call Will Not Own Upon Hasn't Been Found.

San Francisco, Oct. 2.—The defense in the Durrant case did today that which it has often urged the prosecution to do, members of the jury, Dr. Cheney lectured on the afternoon of April 5, and asked each one if he answered to Durrant's name at the roll call.

While the step taken by the defense today in calling Durrant's classmates to the stand is generally regarded as a bold move, it cannot be said that it resulted to the material advantage of either side.

Great stress was laid by both sides today on the memory of the witnesses as to the individual students who attended the lecture. While the prosecution showed that not one of the students who were placed on the stand remembered seeing Durrant at the lecture, the defense brought out the fact that the witnesses did not remember any other student who was present.

Ernest McCullough, a civil engineer, testified with regard to the dimensions and interior arrangement of Oppenheim's parlor. The object of the testimony was to show that Oppenheim, who is nearsighted, could not have positively identified the man who said to have been the murderer of Blanche Lamont's ring.

JULIET'S BAD TEMPER.

Margaret Mather Horsewhips Her Husband in the Street.

GREAT SCANDAL IN MILWAUKEE.

Pabst Ran, but She Caught Him—He Gets the Whip, and She Punches His Nose.

Milwaukee, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Gustav G. Pabst, formerly Margaret Mather, the actress, created a sensation here Tuesday by horsewhipping her husband, a son of the wealthy brewer. What was the cause of the trouble no one seems to know, but numerous residents here testify that they were eye-witnesses of the altercation, which began in a buggy in which the couple were riding, said that just about noon on Tuesday Mrs. Pabst drove to turn on to Cedar street toward their home. Mrs. Pabst grabbed the whip from the socket and struck Mr. Pabst full in the face. Mr. Pabst jumped out of the buggy and started down the street.

MARGARET MATHER.

The woman drove the horse to a post, hitched it and followed her husband, overtaking him a block away, where she struck him four times in the face. Young Pabst then wrenched the whip from her hands and threw it away. But the one-sided battle was by no means ended, for she then clenched her fist and planted a blow from the shoulder square on his nose. Mr. Pabst moved on at a rapid pace, the woman following, both entering their home together on Cedar street.

The affair took place in a fashionable part of the city and was witnessed by many onlookers. Friends of the couple gave no explanation of the trouble, and Mr. Pabst could not be found tonight. The horse was allowed to stand where it was until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when Mr. Pabst's coachman took it away. Mrs. Pabst was seen at her home this evening after repeated attempts by friends to induce her to return to the city. She refused to do so, and her father and other friends were out among the newspaper offices tonight, endeavoring to suppress the story. One of them said that his horsewhipping was done only in a fit of temper, that there was nothing but a quarrel between the couple, and that they had always lived peacefully together since their marriage.

Margaret Mather is 32 years old and was born in Detroit, almost in the slums. A barefooted little girl, she sold newspapers on the streets to earn a livelihood. She grew to be a very beautiful woman, and was married to a young man named Hill who was attracted by her handsome face and figure. He took her under his wing and gave her a dramatic education. When she made her debut in New York as Juliet, Hill had spent $30,000 on her. She made a great hit, and her earnings were enormous. She was married in February, 1887, to Emil Haskin, who was a young man of great promise, but deserted her after a few years and got a divorce. He died at Los Angeles, June 8, 1894. Up to 1892 Miss Mather's reputation had been good, although her ingratitude toward her husband was notorious. She left, was a subject of comment. She was married at Kenosha, Wis., July 26, 1892, to Gustav G. Pabst, a militia colonel and the brother of the Milwaukee millionaire. After her marriage she went on a theatrical tour, appearing in Seattle, among other places. Young Pabst followed her, and the couple were so affectionate that their action caused much scandal. Finally they announced the wedding, and Mrs. Pabst retired from the stage.

FOR THE TEMPLE CUP.

Baltimore Beats Cleveland in a Hot Ball Game.

Cleveland, Oct. 2.—About 7,000 people witnessed the opening game between the Baltimore and Cleveland clubs in the Temple cup series here today. The weather was perfect, the air being just cool enough to put life into the players, and the sky without a cloud. The game was a hot one, and the players were in fine fettle. The fielding being sharp on both sides, though the visitors made a better showing in the score. Young was in the box for the home team, and McGraw handled the ball for the visitors. The loss was broken in the fifth inning, when McGraw drove a corking single to left field. He was followed by Young with a safe infield hit. Burckett's clever sacrifice advanced both runners, and McGraw scored on Keeler's fly to Gleason. Baltimore tied the score in the sixth on McGraw's pop hit over third. Keeler's sacrifice, Jennings' fly out to center and McGraw's fumble of Kelly's hot hit. Cleveland made another in the sixth on Tebeau's infield hit. Zimmerman's sacrifice, McGraw's fly out to center and McGraw's fumble of Kelly's hot hit. Cleveland made another in the eighth. McGraw hit to left, advanced on Keeler's out, and scored on Jennings' single. Kelly's single advanced McGraw to third, and he scored on Robinson's force-out of Kelly at second. Cleveland got another in the same inning on Tebeau's double and Blake's single. After that the game was a matter of doubles by Robinson and McGraw, the home team clinched the game with two runs made on a double by Burckett and singles by McGraw and McGraw. McGraw and Kelly carried off the honors at the bat, and McGraw, Young and Jennings in fielding. Batteries—Young and Zimmerman; McMahon and Robinson. Score: Baltimore, 6; Cleveland, 3.

GALE ON THE BRITISH COAST

Forty-nine Vessels Wrecked and Twenty-five Lives Lost.

London, Oct. 2.—The intense heat throughout Great Britain for the past ten days, unprecedented in weather records, culminated yesterday in a sudden drop of 25 degrees, followed by a heavy gale which caused much damage along the coast. WHO WILL PAY THE DAMAGE?

City Will Be Sued for Govser's Work—The Pipe Vase Wreak.

It is a question who will have to pay the damage caused by the breaking of the water main on Pioneer place Tuesday afternoon, but it seems to be the general impression among those interested that the city will be held responsible. Contract Spurr says that he was not to blame for the accident, and does not know why he should be called upon to pay for it. The city engineer, however, stated that he would not be held responsible for it, and will undoubtedly bring suits to recover, but against whom the suits will be brought is undecided. The estimate of the city engineer is that $1,500 would cover the amount of damage done, and is verified by fuller examination.
