CARLSUHE AT BRESLAU.

Massachusetts Reform Club Gives Him an Ovation.

HE TALKS ON THE CURRENCY.

Says the Free Coinage Movement is No Longer Formidable.

The Thing to Be Done Next is to Retire the Greenbacks—He Says the Present Administration Will Issue Bonds Whenever Necessary.

Boston, Oct. 12.—The meeting of the Massachusetts Reform Club at the Vendome tonight was a tremendous ovation to Secretary Carlisle, and his speech on the currency of the government under the present administration was listened to with the greatest interest. Secretary Carlisle began by asserting that the business of Boston needed no instruction upon the subject of "sound currency." He said they deserved the thanks of the whole country for having put aside party politics in their honest efforts during the past two or three years to uphold the administration at Washington City and help sustain the credit and honor of the government and prevent the depreciation of its currency. He spoke of the action of the Boston bankers, who, at a critical period in the business affairs of the country, almost emptied their vaults of gold by depositing $4,000,000 in the treasury to replenish the vanishing reserves. He said this action had been fully appreciated at Washington City and not wholly unexpected. Continuing, he said: "The mere apprehension that our currency might be debased by the inability of the government to continue the policy of redeeming its obligations in gold has already produced one of the most serious financial disturbances that has ever occurred in our history and has resulted in the loss of thousands of millions of dollars to our people. There were doubtless other causes contributing to this result, but this was the most potent one in this country, and without it we should not have suffered from the depression that has prevailed throughout the world from the general depression. Fortunately, one of the causes which contributed largely to produce a feeling of distrust and apprehension, and which very greatly intensified the feeling at all the stages of our long financial struggle, has substantially ceased to exert any influence over the minds of the people here or abroad. It means the present and aggressive agitation in favor of the free coinage of legal tender silver, which for a long time seriously threatened to revolutionize our monetary system and to reduce our entire volume of currency to about half its present value. I do not mean to assert that there was ever a time when there was real danger of such a result being done, but there were times when the sentiment in its favor was so strong and so aggressive in its character that there were at that time reasons to entertain the fear that it might be accomplished, and especially reasonable grounds for such a fear upon the part of investors abroad.

"But the free coinage movement is no longer formidable or aggressive. It is on the defensive, and when a revolutionary movement is compelled to defend itself, it is no longer a danger to the community. No one well informed now believes that our standard of value will be changed, or that the financial policy which has steadily pursued by the present administration will be abandoned.

"The secretary then reverted to his oft-repeated arguments in favor of a gold standard as against the free coinage of silver. He declared that the only safe abandonment or defeat of the free silver movement must not be expected to be sufficient to insure permanent financial peace. He would not, however, advise the government's obligation under the $46,650,000 of outstanding notes subject to redemption on presentation. One of the most important questions people have now to consider, he said, is whether they can afford to adhere longer to a system which periodically augments the public debt for the purpose of securing gold by the issuing of bonds. He said that notes, which, when redeemed, are not retired and canceled, but are reissued and put in circulation, to be over and over again presented for redemption.

"So far as the merits of this single question are affected," he said, "it is immaterial whether our standard of value is to be gold or silver, because the only redemption process, whether it be gold coin or silver coin, must be provided by the government, and it can be procured only by the sale of bonds. The government continues to maintain the gold standard of value or debase our currency to the silver standard, the obligation of the government to issue bonds is not affected. The question will remain, and consequently the question whether the notes when redeemed shall be retired and canceled or reissued is one which cannot be avoided or settled by a change in our coinage laws. It must be settled by legislation in another direction, and the advocates of free coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1, or at any other ratio, are as much interested in its correct solution as the opponents of that policy."

"The secretary declared it to be his opinion that the notes outstanding should be retired as speedily as possible, and a safe currency can be secured to take their place. He said he would not take the time to discuss the various plans for the retirement of the notes, but he assured his hearers that until such time as congress should enact the necessary legislation to eliminate the weakness in the present currency system, the present administration might as well depend on to follow the course which it had pursued in the past generations.

Collector Warren, Charles Jackson and Hon. John E. Russell also spoke.

THE DUTY OF SILVER MEN.

A Republican Vote Is a Vote Against Gold Metallism. Denver, Oct. 12.—In a letter to C. C. Clayton, secretary of the Republican State League of Colorado, urging the Republicans of this state to stand firmly with the national organization, Senator Charles F. Johnson, of New Hampshire, says: "The Republican party will go into the next presidential battle pledged to bi-metallicism, which I believe, as sure as it is right, will win. On the other hand, the Democratic leaders, the men who dominate and control its national influence, patronage and organization, are gold mono-metallicists. Cleveland and his administration are absolutely in the hands of J. Pierpont Morgan and his syndicate of foreign bankers; they are against silver as a money metal, and they are committed to gold mono-metallicism. With the patronage of the government, with money manipulated by William C. Whitney and Calvin S. Brice, the Democratic party is hopelessly subjugated, and their next national convention will be as hostile to the principles of bi-metallicism as are the English creditors who propose to exact the pound of flesh from their debtors in all parts of the world. It is the height of folly for any bi-metallicist to conceive that anything but gold mono-metallicism can come from another Democratic national victory."

"We bi-metallicists outnumber the gold mono-metallicists of the world 100 to 1, and need not fear that we shall not eventually succeed. With a practical suggestion I close a bi-metallic conference held in the United States will be attended by representatives of all the Western hemispheres' governments, and from the governments of Russia, France, Japan and China. Bi-metallic organizations in Canada, India and every other country will send delegates. The decision of the conference that the nations should coin silver without limit at the ratio of 16 to 1 will be irresistible, even by England and Germany. Our congress should call a conference and provide for paying its expenses."

A SOCIALIST BUSINESS.

One of the Notables at the Congress of Breslau.

BEBEL AND LIEBKNECHT WIN.

The Prussia Diet Will Probably Pass an Anti-Socialist Measure.

But the Emperor Will Not Venture to Introduce Bills in the Reichstag—The Russian Chancellor Visits the Emperor—The Emperor Orders a Socialist Charge Denied.

Copyrighted by the Associated Press. Berlin, Oct. 12.—The socialist convention at Breslau has been followed by the general public with a great deal more interest than was the case with the convention of 1884 at Frankfurt. The warring elements within the ranks have been sharply arrayed against each other. The younger, more practical and moderate wing of the party, though two of its ablest leaders, Liebknecht and Bebel, were absent through ill health, displayed great strength. This was more especially the case during the long and bitter night which was waged over the agrarian program. The Liebknecht and Bebel wing of the party, however, is still dominant, and the small farmers and farm hands throughout Germany will therefore not yet be welcomed within the ranks of the socialist army. The convention was, in accordance with the special instructions issued by Herr Koelliker, the Prussian minister of the interior, under severe police supervision. Consequently the noisy party demonstrations which had been planned could not be carried out. A number of foreign delegates, especially from France, Germany, Dr. Ellenberg, were expelled by the police on the ground that they were obnoxious foreigners.

An unusual feature of the convention was the presence of the Duchess Pauline Mathilda of Wurtemberg, now the wife of a wealthy physician of Breslau named Wilhelm. This lady, who is decidedly eccentric, was in the company of her husband, and she manifested her intense socialism by frequently applauding the most excited utterances of the speakers. She demonstrated her loyalty to the cause in hearty sympathy with the most radical remarks and propositions made. The marriage of Duchess Pauline Mathilda to Dr. Wilhelm was a most unusual affair. The doctor, who is a handsome and amiable gentleman, was summoned to Carlisle to attend a member of the ducal family of Wurtemberg, who was ill. This was in 1880, and the Duchess Pauline, who was frequently thrown into the society of the doctor in the course of his professional visits to the court, fell in love with him. She had a most unusual husband, and finally notified her family that she intended to marry the good-looking physician. At first the family strongly opposed the match, but the duchess was so determined that she would have her way in any case, a reluctant consent was given. At the wedding ceremony the clergyman who officiated at the ceremony, in the situation in life of the young couple and the marked incident that the duchess had come down to the rank of her husband. This caused the bride to explain warmly that she did not care for the rank of a view of the case, and that on the contrary she looked up to her husband. Contrary to general expectations, the duchess has been a most happy wife, and the doctor assists her husband very effectively in his practice, accompanying him especially on his visits to poor patients and bestowing upon them the good finds to be in the most need of assistance.

The congress at Breslau concluded its labors today. Gotha was selected as the site for the next meeting of the socialist party. Herren Singer and Bebel were elected presidents and Herren Anier and Parnau vice-presidents. The Prussian cabinet held a meeting which lasted four hours on Wednesday last, and discussed the intended modification of the law on the subject of the bill which Herr Koelliker has been working at for some time past. It is understood that the minister came to the decision that he should submit his project for approval at once, and it would result in the passing of the bill which he had next week, embodying his idea in a measure which will be of a reactionary character, curtailing the right of public and political meetings, and spreading the law of the Saxon law, which is the strictest and most illiberal of the German laws dealing with associations. This is intended to be the first step in the direction of socialism in Prussia. It will be the only attempt at anti-socialist legislation which will be made during the present session of the Reichstag, and it is expected that the bill will pass the Prussian diet, whose composition is widely different from that of the Reichstag.

It is the project of the Prussian cabinet to have taken to Leipzig, where they will be in the Reichstag building, which was the subject of the case, and the opinion of the large general staff has been obtained of the affair, which is considered one of the most important of many years. The principal defendant is a man named Paul Schoerer, a native of the duchy of Luxembourg, but a naturalized Frenchman. He was arrested in Paris in 1887, and was held in custody against all the prisoners in any case suffices to insure their conviction. The persons in custody are kept strictly isolated in the prison.

Lord Salisbury's Cabinet Called to Consider the Eastern Question—France Cuts a Small Figure, as the Servant of Russia—Turkey Fortifying the Dardanelles.

Washington City, Oct. 12.—Secretary Obeyesee received this evening a cable from Vice Consul Chelton, dated Trebizond, which contained but one word: "Quiet." Trebizond is the place in Armenia where the rioting occurred a few days ago, resulting in 200 fatalities. The state department continues Vice Consul Chelton's telegram to mean that the rioting has ceased. Vice Consul Chelton is on his way to his post at Erzerum, a few consulates established by the last congress, after the Armenian massacre last year.

London, Oct. 12.—There is no denying that the condition of affairs at Constantinople is a most serious one, and that the people are wondering why it is not still more alarming today. The Eastern question reaches its acute stage in the East, and the six powers presented what seems to have been very much like an ultimatum to the Porte in the shape of an identical note, and when the Turkish government by one wronger and another failed to reply, it looked very much as if the British fleet of nineteen warships peacefully rocking and pitching at its anchorage in the straits of the Dardanelles, would be called upon to still further impress upon the Turkish mind that Europe is in earnest in commanding reform for Armenia and protection for the Christian subjects of the Porte.

If there is any doubt as to the grave turn which the Turkish situation has taken, it is dispelled by the statement that the situation is serious enough to call for the submission of a memorandum to the Emperor of Russia, who is enjoying the autumn breezes at his estate near the sea port, the equally hurried return from Switzerland of Lord Salisbury, and the call for a cabinet council, which is to be held early next week.

The British Mediterranean squadron has been sent to the island of Lemnos, not far from the entrance to the straits of the Dardanelles, for two weeks past. The ordinary cruising of the fleet in the area would have brought the British warships to this island, but the cruise would have been continued and no prolonged stop would, under ordinary circumstances, have been made so near the Dardanelles. Therefore it is not surprising that even the Turks have been convinced of the fact that the ships of Gibraltar, now off the island, have been brought there under direct instructions from the British government.

Although it outwardly seems as if there is perfect accord between the six powers in regard to the Eastern question, the position of France is exciting some uneasiness in certain circles, and the question whether France will attempt to go to war as well as in Germany, the general opinion being that she would be guided in this, as well as in many other matters, by Russia.

Athens, Oct. 12.—The Greek consul at Trebizond, Armenia, has sent a report to his government that during the recent conflicts there between Turks and Armenians, Constantinople, Oct. 12.—Advisors from Trebizond say persons were killed or wounded during the rioting there between Turks and Armenians. A communication made public by the Turkish government states that the Armenians at Trebizond attacked the Mussulmans before the authorities could interfere and that fifty persons were killed or wounded on both sides. It also tried to attack the Mussulmans, but they were prevented by the police. During the disturbance an Armenian was killed by a police officer.

The Russian government has canceled the order for the dispatch of a warship to Trebizond, owing to representations of the Russian ambassador in Constantinople that the presence of the warship would lead to a disturbance and disorder.

The last of the Armenians left the churches of Stamboul in which they sought refuge yesterday in the presence of the fragments of the different embassies, the government having promised that the refugees should not be molested, and no Armenians were allowed to go to any other place. The Armenian population of the city has sent a message to Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, expressing satisfaction at the success of the measures taken by the ambassadors to clear the Armenian churches of refugees. Later Sir Philip Currie has been seen to Besika bay, near the entrance to the Dardanelles, to survey sites for forts. Three vessels with ammunition have been sent to the forts at the Dardanelles, and it is now known beyond a doubt that the work of laying submarine mines in the straits has been commenced.
