Long Threatened Claim Against the County Made.

BOB WILSON GETS INJUNCTION

Anthony Warrant Not to Be Paid— Novel Point in the Darville Case— A Knot-Sawyer's Story.

The oft-mentioned suit of Coroner Askam against the county to collect on bills that the county commissioner rejected during the fight that was led by Commissioner Heaton, took material form last evening, when a bulky document was filed with County Clerk Gordon.

In all cases where inquests were held Coroner Askam says that the bodies were removed and the cause of death was known and there existed reasonable grounds to believe that the person came to his death at the hands of another by unlawful means.

"BOB" WILSON HAS HIS DAY. Payment of Anthony's Warrant Enjoined Without Heaton's Opposition. County Commissioner Heaton kept his word, and let "Bob" Wilson have a field day in court yesterday, and as a result Wilson secured a temporary injunction against the payment by County Treasurer Maple of a $10 warrant issued to Fred Anthony, of North Bend.

Wilson contended that at some time between January 1, 1915, Heaton and Anthony mutually agreed to defraud the county by claiming to have performed work on county roads. To carry this plan into execution Heaton and Anthony presented a claim to the board of commissioners as follows:

"North Bend, Wash., May 30, 1916. County of King, road district No. 67, commissioners of District No. 1, Fred Langley, Dr. To work done on road in road No. 21, township 23 north, range 8 east, $10."

suments Judge Osborn took the matter under consideration and at the afternoon session said he had grave doubt on the question; that it was raised for the first time in this cause, and that because of the condition in which the construction claimed, if adopted, would leave the law on this subject in a state of doubt.

HOW HIS HAND WAS SAWED.

Knot-Sawyer Suing for Damages Explains the Operation. Levi Tarr, who is suing E. Overton, the Ballard shingle mill owner, for $5,000 for the amputation of two fingers, a thumb and half of his right hand by a knot sawyer, is in the district court, presided by Judge Humes' court yesterday afternoon and told a jury how it was done.

First he held up his right hand and waved the saw remaining fingers. All the jurors were interested because the remainder of what was a hand was a peculiar-looking thing. Then he said that he went to work for Mr. Overton in September, 1914, and was not pitched after one or two changes because a knot sawyer. The chute that took the refuse matter from the saw down to the carrier, according to the witness, was not pitched enough, and the refuse matter clogged so that he had to use a pole to push it away.
