

Special Today....

Protect Your Horses
And cows from flies. "Tough on Flies" is the best preparation made. Trial cans, 25c each.

French Sardines...
10c per can
$1.99 per dozen

Fresh Rolled Oats.
Crisp and rich in flavor.
5-pound sack, 25c.
10-pound sack, $1.75.

Store Open Until 9 O'clock Tonight.

COOPER & LEVY WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS
FIRST AVE. SOUTH OF THE DOCK SOUTH OF YELLEN AVE.

SEATTLE MINING EXCHANGE.

La Fleur.
The Constock Gold Mining Company has started work on this wonderful mine. They have consented to give the public the chance of securing a small portion of their holdings, so have placed some of the stock with me for sale. Think of a vein assaying $80 to $120 per ton on the surface!

UNDER FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

Will not list at $100. Lawrence Bros., Tacoma, were the first bicycle dealers in Washington to sell '96 wheels at $75. High-Grade 1896. Post-Palcos sold at $75 prices. LAWRENCE BROS., General Agents, Tacoma, Wash.

EGG PHOSPHATE SODA WATER.

As refreshing as a mountain breeze.

OUR SPECIALTY TODAY :

STIMULANT FOR THE WEARY.

Big Glasses. Long Drinks.

Stewart & Holmes Drug Co., 703 First Ave.

No Breaking Of Tops

By serving them too hard. No corroding of zinc. They cost a little more, but last much longer.

M. SELLER & CO.

JUST TO SHOW THAT WE'RE ALL RIGHT

And to place our Custom-Made Shirts within the reach of all, we will make Six Custom Shirts for $5, Unlaundered, or $5.90 Laundered. No Extra Charge for Colored Bosoms.

To Be Made in No Less Than One-Half Dozen Lots.

QUEEN CITY SHIRT FACTORY, Rooms 2 and 3, Cottrell Block, Cor. Front and Columbia

JUL E. WIRT FOUNTAIN PEN

Reduced to $2 at

RISCH BROS., Jewelers

No. 720 First Avenue.

Seattle Cereal Co.,

Manufacturers of Rolled Oats and Cereal Products.

Chop Feed, Rolled Barley, Etc.

Dealers in GRAIN, OATS a specialty.

Office and Mills, 294-296 Railroad Avenue, Seattle.

"IMPERIAL" On Hams, Bacon or Lard means a home product that cannot be beat. :

Clearance Sale Waists and Belt Sets.

LOWEST PRICES YET.

EMPIRE JEWELRY CO., Inc.,

NO. 706 SECOND AV. NO. 116 CHERRY ST.

MORAN BROS. CO.,

SEATTLE, WASH.

SEATTLE BUILDERS, Founders, Machinists and Boiler Makers. Contractors for the construction of torpedo boat No. 4, U. S. N., and revenue cutter "Golden Rule" and manufacturers for Washington, British Columbia and Alaska for the "Machos" patent water tube boilers.

Shirt Waist Sets, 50c, 75c, $1.

At Hansen's, No. 706 First Avenue.

NETHERLANDS AMERICAN MORTGAGE BANK

MONEY ALWAYS ON HAND.

BASEMENT OF OLYMPIC BLOCK.

WENTON COAL

MERCHANTS DELIVERY CO. ICE AND COAL. Tel. 150. 626, Union St. at First St. File 150

BRYAN AT HIS HOME

Half of Lincoln Turns Out to Greet the Boy Orator.

A GREAT DEAL OF NOISE MADE.

The Candidate Speaks to the People as Neighbors and Friends.

On the Way to Lincoln From St. Louis the Candidate is Well Received—At St. Joe He Protests Against the Commotion of Agitation, Which He Says is an American's Privilege.

St. Joseph, July 17.—At the railway stations between Kansas City and St. Joseph crowds of citizens cheered Bryan. He shook hands with the enthusiastic people. At 12:30 the train returned to St. Joseph, where between 1,000 and 2,000 people were at the railway station. A. J. Enright, Jr., H. Doyne, F. Z. Yonowick and C. F. Cochran, editor of the St. Joseph Gazette, escorted Bryan to the platform erected for the candidate to speak from. Bryan, dressed in a suit with marvelous enthusiasm, greeted the people with the following address:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I believe this is a large crowd that we had when we were here last November here last November. I don't know whether to regard it as curiosity increased or as evidence that the Bryan case has grown since last November. (Applause.) I have been very much satisfied with the interest the people are taking in this campaign. I am not vain enough to suppose that the high eulogies and the high praise which are being bestowed upon me are intended as a personal compliment in view of my age or my rank as a senator. (Applause.)"

Will Squire Desert the Silverites?

Washington City, July 17.—Special.—The Evening Star tonight in an article on the completion of the senate, in counting the silver senators, omits from the list Squire and says that he is a silver man, but has heretofore ranked as a silver man, will vote against silver whenever party lines are drawn.

THE BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE.

Addressed by Bishop Diaz, of Cuba—Officers to Be Re-elected.

Milwaukee, July 17.—The Baptist Young People's convention today the evening of the 17th inst. was conducted by Rev. W. P. McKee, of Minneapolis. Calvary church was crowded to the doors.

He is Very Much in Favor of a New Ticket.

Geneva, July 17.—Henry Watterson, who is sojourning with his family at Geneva, Switzerland, by a correspondent touching the Democratic crisis in the United States. Mr. Watterson has sought the opinion of the Swiss mountains not only for the purpose of completing the life of Abraham Lincoln on which he has been engaged for some time.

"For the last year," said Mr. Watterson, "I have been out of active politics, and on that account I am not in a position to be subject to the action of the arbiters and into exposing myself to criticisms and responsibilities which could not be met. I have no objection to the Democratic ticket, but I am not in a position to take any part in it."

JOHN H. CHAPMAN, PRESIDENT B. Y. P. U.

with attendants on the social section meetings. The sense of the parliament appearing to be that without the societies church work would lag, and the right time to hold them was all the time.

Bishop Diaz held forth at Plymouth church. He spoke as "the man of sorrow," owing to his persecution in Cuba, and entranced the audience with his old phraseology and mixture of Spanish and English. The meeting was favored with a song, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," sung in the Japanese language by a young Japanese girl. There was also an address by a negro clergyman from the South, who had been born a slave, and brought into the church and educated for missionary work. The meeting was closed with the Exhortation half this morning.

The committee on nominations have decided to present the name of John H. Chapman, the present chairman of the B. Y. P. U. international body, for re-election; also the name of F. E. Wilkins for general secretary.

Denver was selected as the place for holding the Baptist Young People's Union convention in 1898, and the following officers were elected: President, John H. Chapman, Chicago; first vice president,

SIXTEEN DROWNED AT CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, July 17.—One more body, that of a man not yet identified, was recovered this morning from the river at the scene of last night's disaster, making the total number of dead removed sixteen. Three men on the boat had not yet been accounted for. Weeping women besieged the morgues throughout the morning. Following is the corrected list of the identified dead: Edward Ryan, Joe K. Hinson, Charles Spencer, Charles Naughton, Fred Foyal, Christ Gerlach, Christ Gerhan, Charles Benninger, Julius Eke, August J. Hansen, William Sanders, Fritz Schmitt, John Lynch, Mark Peopke, William Buche. Nearly all the victims leave large families.

O. R. & N. Thoroughly Reorganized.

Portland, July 17.—The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company is now thoroughly reorganized. This morning a meeting of the stockholders was held at the company's headquarters in this city, and the following directors were elected: C. S. Fairchild, of New York; W. W. Cotton, Henry Fanning, H. W. Corbett, W. M. Ladd, C. H. Lewis, W. B. Ayer, A. L. Mills, E. S. Spencer, E. McNeill, J. G. Woodruff, W. H. Kennedy, all of Portland; and Miles C. Moore, of Walla Walla. The newly elected directors then held a meeting, and elected the following officers: President, E. S. Spencer; general auditor, E. S. Benson; treasurer, George E. Withington. The election of vice president and chairman of the board of directors was postponed until a future meeting. The reorganized company will take charge of the property on August 1.

THE WISCONSIN BOLTERS.

Bragg Says the Spirit of Coercy and Herr Ruled at Chicago.

Milwaukee, July 18.—Senator William P. Vilas and Gen. Edward S. Bragg have each prepared an address to be delivered at a meeting of the Wisconsin bolters at a conference to be held in Milwaukee tomorrow. Bragg's address is

NEW DRAGERS TO BOLT

Meeting of the State Democratic Committee Called.

ADDRESS TO THE PARTY ISSUED.

Delegates to Chicago Will Lay Their Case Before State Convention.

Pending the Meeting of the Convention the Voters Are Urged to Take No Action—Henry Watterson Insists on the Nomination of a New Ticket—Philadelphia Democrats Preparing to Bolt.

Philadelphia, July 17.—Some of the leading Democrats of this city who are opposed to the election of Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform position, met today and passed a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of seven to confer with the state leaders with a view of adopting the best methods of accomplishing the defeat of Bryan and Sewall. The committee will be appointed tomorrow. Among those who were present were Judge Yerkes, W. G. Singery, ex-Supreme Justice Samuel G. Thompson, John C. Bullitt, James D. McKim, Jacob M. Hall, Charles H. Porter, John R. Read, Joe Caldwell and John F. Tobias.

An Idaho Republican Bolts.

Spokane, July 17.—Barrett Sinclair, of Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, a member of the executive committee of the National Republican League, has written the secretary of the league withdrawing from the organization. He says he cannot longer remain with the party, and gives as his reason the belief that it has reversed itself on the financial question.

A Stevens County Republican Bolts.

Spokane, July 17.—M. E. A. Rounse, a Republican of Stevens county, has resigned as Stevens county member of the Republican state central committee. Sir John Pauncefote and Ambassador Bayard. The correspondence is of great interest in marking a sensible advance toward the adoption between the two parties in making arrangements for arbitration as the means of settling disputes between themselves, but the persons who have looked upon the arbitration of the settlement of either or both of the great open issues between the two nations are doomed to disappointment, for at the date of exchange of the last note, one from Secretary Olney to the British ambassador here, dated within a month past, the points of most vital nature in the case, not only of the Venezuelan question, specifically, but of the general arbitration proposition as well, were still the subject of discussion, without much expectation of an early adjustment.

THE GOLD GOING RAPIDLY.

Less Than Ninety-four Millions Left in the Treasury Reserve.

Washington City, July 17.—The treasury today had $2,343,100 in gold coin and bars, of which $2,000,000 was for export, leaving the true amount of the reserve $343,100. The gold is being sold at a rapid rate. The gold is being sold at a rapid rate. The gold is being sold at a rapid rate.

The End of the Rate War.

San Francisco, July 17.—After the departure of the steamer Columbia and the Southern Pacific Co.'s Portland special today, the advanced rates to Portland by both rail and steamer line went into effect. The rate on the Columbia was $1.00, and the rate on the Southern Pacific was $1.00. The rate on the Columbia was $1.00, and the rate on the Southern Pacific was $1.00.

California Murderer Hanged.

Palo Alto, Cal., July 17.—John E. Howard was hanged in the prison corridor today for the murder of Martin Delaney in Tulare county in June, 1884. Only twenty persons beside the prison officials witnessed the execution. Howard was calm and composed till the drop fell, a slight twitching of the hands giving the only evidence of agitation. He was then treated as he had received, and then said to the small group of spectators: "Well, boys, I hide goes with the law. Life was extinct in exactly thirteen minutes. To the last Howard protested that the killing was in self-defense, in fact, he said that the murdered man was shot in the back of the head. Shortly after his arrival at the prison he expressed sorrow for the killing and asked for a religious consolation, but after the governor declined to interfere he became defiant. Last night and this morning he made the most of his time, and upon the prison chaplain, and dropped all pretense of religious conviction. W. U. Pierce, a cousin, was the only relative of Howard who witnessed the execution.

To Collect the Chinese War Indemnity.

Chicago, July 17.—Five diminutive, dark-skinned Japanese are at the Auditorium almost unobserved in the crowd of comparatively gigantic Americans. Although they came without flourish, they have it in their power to disturb the exchange rate of the world, for they are on their way to London to collect the Chinese war indemnity. The party includes the Honorable Mr. Scherzer, returned to San Francisco, and the Honorable Mr. Kokiichi, president of the Yokohama Specie Bank. "The money we are to collect," said President Kokiichi, "is to be delivered to us in gold in London. The amount is $100,000,000, with added interest. The money is to be paid over to the Bank of Japan in London, and the remainder is to be paid to the Japanese government. It will then be handed over to me as the representative of the Yokohama Specie Bank. In addition to the $100,000,000, about $2,000,000 for thecession of the Liaotung peninsula, and 500,000 taels yearly while troops are stationed at Weihaiwei."

The Colombia Being "Tripped."

Pescadero, Cal., July 17.—There is no news from the Colombia since last night. The steamer is resting very quietly on her rocky bed. No steam can be generated from her boilers, as everything below is awash. The steam schooner Jewell is furnishing the power to hoist what is movable from the Colombia to two scows that are lying alongside. They are taking off her spars, chains, ropes, donkey engines, dynamo, and fact everything.

Paymaster Webster Convicted.

Washington City, July 17.—Judge Advocate General Lemly, of the navy, has received a report of the court-martial in the case of Paymaster Paymaster E. B. Webster, stationed at Mare Island, Cal. The charge was that Mr. Webster took cash instead of a bond from a clerk at the time the clerk left the service. The court finds Webster guilty and sentences him to a term of imprisonment. The papers are being prepared for final submission to Secretary Herbert.

The Hallett & Davis Co. Falls.

Chicago, July 17.—The Hallett & Davis Co., dealers in pianos and organs, made an assignment today to George C. Aldrich. A statement was filed showing assets of $23,000; liabilities, $42,000.

Another attraction for this Saturday night: The First Presbyterian ladies give a lawn fête in old university grounds. Everybody come, moonlight, music and good cheer assured to all.

SALISBURY ULTIMATUM

Write Letters Upon Arbitration and Venezuela.

SALISBURY PROPOSES A TREATY

For Arbitration of Certain Matters, With Right of Appeal.

Olney Says the Appeal Proposition is Absurd, and Complains of the Extension of Venezuela From Arbitration—Salisbury Denies That Venezuela is Excluded, and is Very Conciliatory.

Washington City, July 17.—The correspondence which has passed between the governments of the United States and Great Britain respecting the establishment of a general system of arbitration for the settlement of international disputes, and also for the settlement by arbitration of the dispute over the Venezuelan boundary, has been made public by the issue of a number of letters which have been exchanged between Secretary Olney, Lord Salisbury, Sir Julian Pauncefote and Ambassador Bayard. The correspondence is of great interest in marking a sensible advance toward the adoption between the two nations of a system of arbitration as the means of settling disputes between themselves, but the persons who have looked upon the arbitration of the settlement of either or both of the great open issues between the two nations are doomed to disappointment, for at the date of exchange of the last note, one from Secretary Olney to the British ambassador here, dated within a month past, the points of most vital nature in the case, not only of the Venezuelan question, specifically, but of the general arbitration proposition as well, were still the subject of discussion, without much expectation of an early adjustment.

Notable features of the correspondence are the fact that whereas Mr. Bayard, by instruction from Secretary Olney, proposed an arbitration scheme, following the lines of the arbitration scheme of the spring of 1885; that Secretary Olney later insisted upon associating the two subjects, the evidently engaging alliance otherwise; that as to general arbitration the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial disputes, save with the addition of provisions that, in the estimation of Secretary Olney, will render the attempt to arbitrate some of the most important disputes, and the refusal of the British government to accept the arbitration of the issues which still prevent an agreement are the indisposition of the British government to include territorial