

Out-of-Town Society

ACOMA, Dec. 12.—Special.—The giddy whirl is not at all giddy at present, for everyone is busy planning for the holidays and attending to the various little purchases that must precede the making of all Christmas offerings. The stores here have begun to feel the rush of business that keeps Uncle Sam's employees working day and night during the season. Not that there is a dearth of entertainment; oh, no. Societies people have seen too busy attending the various social amusements to feel the need of these affairs. What with Lolo Fuller, the public has had a variety of unique and amusing amusements, and every one might choose his favorite form of entertainment from so widely differing a list. Of course the most notable evening was Thursday, when Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler appeared on the stage and came forth with a beautiful musical treat. A large and very expectant audience awaited the pianist, and even the fact that her appearance was delayed an hour and a half, did not prevent her from receiving a hearty greeting when at last she appeared on the stage and came forth with a beautiful musical treat.
