

THE PASSING THROUGH.

Passengers from the Eastern states are pouring into Seattle over all three of the transcontinental lines on their way to the Yukon and Klondike. The Great Northern has just booked a list of twenty-five for the steamer Cleveland, several of whom have already arrived in the city. They are mainly from Boston and other points in New England. The hotels have all they can do to handle the mass of visitors. Last night the Williams one of the leading hotels had a room. None was to be had. The hotel, telephoned to six other hotels, and each of them in the same condition. The second message was more successful. The lady went to the house designated, and arrived just in time to secure the last room for the night. Her announcement of the apartment followed her in at the door. The great majority of this unusual throng is in one way or another connected with the Klondike movement. For instance, at the New England hotel there are two separate groups of men from Boston, both on their way to the Klondike. The first group consists of a party of ten, as follows: H. J. Wilburn, John Kinney, Joe Crawford, Joe Matthews, Ed. Brown, and Thomas Cunningham. The second group, consisting of Mr. W. H. Wilburn, Mr. Kinney, Owen Stanhope, William Charles Kinney, Fred Todd, and Dr. Graham. They could not all obtain passage on the steamer, and they have accordingly secured the Williams for the night. They carry with them ten horses, from which their supplies will average 150 pounds to the man. Thomas Hines and Thomas Cunningham, of Boston, are also at the New England, ready to sail on the Willamette for the Klondike. Elmer Hepper is another Shellenhamer man who will hitch his luck there this week. There is a considerable party of Colorado people at the St. Charles ready to start on the Klondike movement. Among them are A. Crown, of Denver; George Murray, of Alton; C. P. Osberg, of Astoria; D. C. Ryckman, of Astoria; and there are also. He expects to get away on the Willamette. Among his guests who are moving toward the Klondike the Stevens sheltered last night W. V. Wells and E. E. Nelson, both of Anacortes. Mr. Wells was formerly city attorney and Mr. Nelson was for some time bookkeeper for the Anacortes American. Others who are going from Anacortes are Lewis Evans, Dan Sullivan, Ed Todd, T. L. Burton and Claude Vassar, from the same city, will go up soon, but expect to winter at Dena. Mr. Wells and Mr. Nelson spent the day in Seattle yesterday purchasing their outfits, which are for a period of two years. "What do you suppose the daily cash receipts of the large grocery houses have been for the last two or three weeks?" "I can state positively that several of the largest retail establishments in the city have taken in between $5,000 and $10,000 a day." A major portion of the money spent in the city goes naturally to outfitters, but other lines also have been very busy. The Butler has obtained permission to build a viaduct from the hotel to the Pioneer building, and will fill up all the vacant rooms in the latter building. Old buildings long vacant are being fitted up for the accommodation of guests and probably before next spring new hotels will be built. A car load of dogs, bound from St. Paul to the Klondike by way of Seattle it was the opinion of some railroad men yesterday that outside of possible shipments for dog shows never was such a car load of freight heard of before. Even at the exhibitions which are patronized by dog fanciers the shipment of dogs is made for short distances, and it is doubtful whether an entire car load of dogs was ever made up at all in the history of the world. L. H. Gray, of the Great Northern, however, was called on yesterday to quote a line on a car load of canines from St. Paul to this city. He said he had never heard of such a shipment. He sought in vain through his vast volumes of freight schedules. No where in all the range of freight negotiations had the road ever before been called upon to deal with the shipment of a whole car load of dogs. Applying what the lawyers would call the equity of the case, he decided that the rates on live stock would be the most applicable, and he was quoted, with the result that in a ways the shipment of dogs will arrive via the Great Northern. "What, when these dogs arrive in Seattle will be moved in trucks? The dogs are quoted as being of any particular color or blood, and they will no doubt have a motley appearance, ranging from a Newfoundland or pointer to a collie, with all possible intermixtures. People at a distance may possibly not understand the emergency which calls for such an unusual shipment. In a word, it is the movement to the Klondike and back. Dogs are needed for hauling the loads over the trails. They are very valuable, and they are being sold at a price that is not to be compared with the prices of a few days ago. Young Calhoun, who went up this spring and paid $5 for a pair of bull hounds, which attracted much attention on the streets of Seattle, where they were paraded for several days arrayed in harness ready for drawing a sleigh. The owners of valuable blooded dogs just at this time the Alaska steamer sailed, and the natural surmise has been in such cases that the dogs have been taken at the last minute by persons sailing on the steamer and carried to Alaska. It has been generally understood throughout the city for some time that any good, large, robust dog could be sold at a handsome price, either here or in Juneau. E. F. Sweeney, owner of the yacht Agassiz, was recently chartered to take Harry Edgill and his mountain climbing party to Alaska. He received a letter from the master of the yacht, E. M. Penland, giving a pleasant account of the prince and his party were safely landed at Cape Manby June 21. The letter was written on board the yacht at Sitka, Alaska, under date of June 25. "After letting go of the tugboat at Hope Sound, we lay becalmed for one whole day. The wind then came from the southeast and increased to a heavy gale, which lasted for twenty hours, but we ran through the whole of it under three reefs, and for over nine hours made good time. A half knot an hour. We arrived at Sitka June 1, just one week from Seattle, having made a very good passage. In fact, probably the best ever made from Cape Scott. The little vessel was a wonder when it comes to keeping its hold on top of the water in rough weather.

"We landed the prince and party on June 2 at Cape Manby, which is twenty-two miles from here, and shall stop here until about August 10, when we will go and pick them up again and land them at Sitka. It will probably be about the 1st of September before we arrive at Seattle. "This is the only safe harbor to lie in for a distance of over 200 miles. It is perfectly safe. We shall point and otherwise everything the vessel will have if we can find clear weather enough to do so. It is thick here most of the time. "The change in the rig of the ribs is a great improvement in every way. The center-bulkhead has been made such a source of annoyance for so long, has given us no trouble whatever, and the little vessel is all O. K. in every other respect." A. C. Van Doren, of B. M. Behrends' mercantile house at Juneau, was a passenger down on the Al-Ki. Mr. Van Doren says the truth of the statement in W. L. Shank's letter, published yesterday in the Post-Intelligencer, that provisions are scarce in Juneau, and that bacon is selling at 50 cents a pound. "Juneau merchants can sell a man everything he wants for a Yukon outfit. We were out of bacon two days until the arrival of the Queen, but we have not sold a pound of it in a year for more than 12 cents. The statement that we were charging 50 cents is ridiculous. "Such things as these make our people feel sore." Practically all of our supplies are purchased from Seattle wholesalers. For years now this city has derived immense benefit through its Alaska business, and it looks to us as though we should be entitled to fair treatment. "Have many people left Juneau for the Yukon? Well, yes, a good many. The come line lost fifty men, fifty went from Sitka creek, and the "readjust" losses. Experienced quartz miners are needed. Wages are $3.50 a day and the work is, of course, lasting. Common labor is already plentiful there, but good miners will have no trouble getting work." Douglas Allmond, formerly of the Anacortes American, now foreman of the state printing office at Olympia, has foregone his ambition to go to the Klondike and decided to remain at his post. He was in the city yesterday, and reported a great run of fish at Anacortes. "There are lots of fish there now," he said to a reporter last night at the Stevens. "You know the capacity of the three canneries at Anacortes is 4,000 cans per day. The abundance of salmon just now is such that they could get all they can use. Unfortunately, however, labor is scarce and they are not able to run at their full capacity. Many of our men are leaving for the Klondike, and it is difficult to get others to take their place." A. J. Calvert, of Milwaukee, Wis., who has charge of the Rescue Mission in that city, is one of the many Eastern people spending a few days here. Mr. Calvert went to San Francisco during the Endeavor convention, then came north by steamer. "This Klondike excitement is a great experience for me," he said yesterday. "I want to congratulate the Post-Intelligencer on the way it has put Seattle in the front. Yours is the best paper I've seen here. Just to show you how much I like it, I have ordered it sent to my home in Milwaukee." "Have I got the Klondike fever? Yes, I must say I have to some extent. I am going home tomorrow, but you need not be surprised to see me back in the spring. Oh, this is a great country, yes, sir." A. H. Roberts, formerly a manufacturer's agent of Los Angeles, is in the city outfitting for the Klondike. In company with J. T. Ginnold, of this city, he leaves on the Willamette. This will go to the Stewart river and will have provisions enough to last a year and a half, taking also their own horses. Mrs. John A. Miller, who is visiting friends in Boston, has been seriously ill with diphtheria, but is now rapidly recovering. Her husband, who is freight and passenger agent of the Great Northern, has received assurance that she is out of danger. A Sister's Efforts Useless. Clara Becker, a good-looking young woman of uncertain age, was taken to police headquarters yesterday afternoon from 215 1/2 Washington street, at the request of her sister, a Mrs. Swanson, of Ballard. Mrs. Swanson told the police that her sister was 15 years old, but the girl told the captain that if the figure six was turned upside down, and left in the same position as the figure eight, it would give her real age. The girl persisted that she was 19, and after some time had elapsed she was released. After this Mrs. Swanson came to the police station for the first time to the Washington street house after the girl. She was not there. In the Divorce Court. Emma O'Neill was yesterday granted a divorce from her husband, John P. O'Neill, to whom she was married at Port Townsend May 4, 1911. Judge Moore heard the case in the divisions in Mrs. O'Neill's complaint were desertion and failure to provide. The plaintiff was granted the permission to resume her maiden name, Emma Reiff. There was no issue in the marriage. Wilson's Yukon Guide, new edition from press July 28th, all information to date about new trails and new routes. THE MORTGAGE LAW.

JUDGE MOORE RULES ON A NEW PHASE OF IT. A Case Wherein an Innocent Tenant Must Necessarily Suffer—The Court Denounces a Vicious Practice—A Grievous Collection of Reminders of Murder Trials in the Court-house Garret Disappears. The interpretation of the mortgage law passed by the legislature of 1937 has been brought up in the superior courts a number of times during the last month. Recently, in a case decided by the department, announced an important ruling, in which he held that the new law did not operate on contracts and mortgages executed prior to the date of the act, but that reference to the provisions providing for sale of the mortgaged premises after appraisal, and possession thereof by the mortgagee during the period of redemption. Yesterday a new phase of the law was presented to Judge Moore in the foreclosure suit entitled Colledge vs. the Superior Court, in which a certain mortgagor had defaulted on payment of interest and principal for over a year. A receiver had been appointed, the court having adjudged the security insufficient for the debt. The case came up yesterday on the application of the plaintiff for an order compelling W. A. Watson, the tenant under the mortgage, to pay to the receiver from the date of his appointment. It appeared from the pleadings in the case that Watson had paid nine months' rent in advance, dating from February 11 last. The receiver sought to collect rent from July 1, but was resisted by the tenant, who showed his receipt for rent up to December 11. Quite a long argument was made yesterday by the attorneys in the case. There is a pathetic side to the story, not recorded in the law books, but which is well known to the court. Watson is a poor man. He recently suffered an accident in which his hip was broken, and now he lies at home, helpless, and unable to provide for his family. Surely this is a case in which justice should be tempered with mercy, urged his attorney. The court, however, rendered the ruling granting the application for an order compelling Watson to either move or pay rent. In announcing his decision, Judge Moore said: "There has grown up what may be called a vicious practice, in which mortgagors allow the charges against the mortgagee to accumulate, and account who neither pay interest, principal nor taxes, and then come into court and ask that they be allowed the rents and profits of the property during the foreclosure of the premises, and after the appointment of a receiver. The court has announced that the mortgage law of 1937 does not apply as to the appointment of receivers where the contract was made prior to the enactment of the statute, and where it is shown that the property has become insufficient security for the loan. It may be that in this case a hardship falls on the tenant in possession, but he had the power to inform himself as to the rights of the mortgagee to make a lease for a term, or to pay the mortgage in advance. In this case the court had adjudged the premises insufficient security for the debt, and a receiver was appointed. Under the law, the mortgagee is entitled, in such a case, to have the rents, issues and profits collected by the receiver applied to the preservation of the mortgaged premises until the payment of the debt. The court's ruling is in accordance with this doctrine, and the ruling will be granted." The announcement of this ruling will have the effect of preventing transactions of this character in the future, in which innocent tenants are allowed to pay rent in advance when the premises are covered by delinquent mortgages. EXHIBITS DISAPPEAR. A Grievous Collection of Reminders of Murder Cases in the Court-house Garret. For years past there has accumulated in the garret at the county courthouse a gruesome collection of reminders of murder cases in this county. The various murderous looking clubs, covered with blood stains and hair, axes and hatchets, clothing and the like. At one time, the horrid assortment reposed in a part of the upper story of the courthouse, which was once used as a theater for amateur theatricals. The brick walls are bare, and a false floor was built over the cement floor. A small stage had been rigged up, extending along one side of the room. Above are the bare brick walls and iron roof of the garret, and from small, round windows at the top can be seen the big statue of Justice. On one end of the platform a ladies' dressing room was partitioned off, and this was made the repository for the ugly-looking exhibits. At one time there was a case, but which had been introduced in a murder case several years ago; a hatchet covered with hair and blood stains; a club, which had been used in the same case in December, 1935, and other articles of like character. They had remained untouched, except by the janitors of the building, for many months. Sheriff Meyer had occasion to visit the garret and found that all save the club in the Bannister case had disappeared. Filled up in the room are a number of books, maps and records, most of them covered with dust. After rummaging around in the debris Sheriff Meyer was unable to find anything but the Bannister case. Bannister was charged with the murder of a negro at the Franklin mines in 1935, but was acquitted. The only theory to account for the disappearance of the articles is that madly inclined individuals, who have been allowed in the upper chambers of the building have taken them away. Some of the missing articles have disappeared since the last month. The janitor of the courthouse accompanied a representative of the Post-Intelligencer through the garret yesterday and endeavored to locate exhibits which had been seen within a short time. He did not find them and could give no explanation of their loss. CHING LET GOES FREE. The Information, Charging Participation in a Loose, Imperfect. Crawford, Conover & Co. 202 and 208 New York Block. taking the preliminary steps looking to the organization of the county board of equalization. An opinion was received from Prosecuting Attorney James McElroy to the effect that under the law the city is entitled to representation, through its council, on the equalization board. The opinion was requested several days ago by the commissioners, the question having been raised in other counties in the state. At Tacoma, Prosecuting Attorney Titlow has rendered an opinion contrary to the ground taken by Mr. McElroy. His position is that the statute of '37 repeals the section of the law of 1935, giving to cities a representation on the board. In this opinion City Attorney John Paul Judson coincides. In Spokane, the prosecuting attorney rendered an opinion to a similar effect, but the city attorney dissented and filed an opinion, taking the same ground as does Mr. McElroy. Corporation Counsel Brown interprets the law in the same manner as Mr. McElroy. The board of county commissioners will act on the advice of the prosecuting attorney. In Pierce county the city will not be accorded representation, and in Spokane the issue hangs in the balance. It is probable that the matter will be taken into the courts for settlement. The board elected Commissioner Ryan chairman, following the law. The city's representatives are expected to go up to the courthouse today and complete the organization of the board. "Mamma, was that a sugar-plum you just gave me?" asked little Mabel. "No, dear, it was one of Dr. Ayer's Pills. 'Please, may I have another?'" Clondyke Clothing.

Our many years of experience in outfitting Alaska prospectors, as well as wholesaling extensively to the Alaska merchants, has taught us exactly what the climate demands. In many instances our clothing and underwear are specially designed and made for our trade. You cannot be too careful regarding the quality of the clothing you select when starting to the Yukon gold fields, as it will be impossible to purchase clothing while in the interior, so the clothing you start with must last you until your return. We do not carry inferior or trashy goods. NOT HOW CHEAP, BUT HOW GOOD, is what we strive for in our Alaska clothing. Will take pleasure in showing you our special lines of Mackinaws, Corduroy Clothing, Flannel Shirts, Arctic Underwear, Sweaters, Blankets, Mitts, Scarfs, Arctic Socks, German Socks, Blanket Lined Duck Clothing.
