

DIES FROM HIS INJURIES.

MARRY W. SCHAFER, THE WIDOWED Mother's Arm-Inquest Will Probably Be Held-Arrest of a Young Man, Claims to Be Son of a Lord.

Harry W. Schaffer, the young man who was run over by a hack near Second avenue and Pike street Wednesday evening, died last evening. He had been doing pretty well all day and had been able to talk, but his color was bad and he died at 7:30 o'clock.

The body was immediately removed to Butterworth's undertaking establishment, and it is probable that an inquest will be held to determine if the driver of the hack, Sam Childs, was to blame for the fatal collision. There is a great deal of feeling along Pike street and in the vicinity of the accident against Childs, and he is blamed with having been driving recklessly. However, no actual witness has yet appeared who saw the hack before the collision. Doctors saw the team just after the accident, looking up the street, and some say that the driver was whipping the horse as if he wanted to get away from the scene to avoid recognition. Childs came back as soon as he got the horses stopped and expressed great regret over the accident and offered such assistance in caring for the boy as he thought would be ministering to his comfort.

Yesterday, while the boy was able to converse, he said to his attendant that the team was coming toward him when the collision occurred; that the knees of the high horse struck him on each shoulder, and the horse then stepped on his stomach. The attending physician stated that the shock which the injured boy sustained was very severe and that he really never rallied from that shock. The doctor refused to give a death certificate last night. This morning at 9 o'clock the coroner, Dr. Yandell, and Dr. Limerick, the attending physician, will have a conference and will endeavor to have eye witnesses, who are on the track of present. They will call in Mr. Childs also to tell the circumstances of the accident. The result of this conference will determine whether an inquest is necessary or not.

Mrs. Louisa Schaffer, the mother of the dead boy, came over from her home at Kent yesterday and was present when he died. She is a widow and has four small children at home. They are poor and she has been largely aiding in their support. It was said last night that William Hutchinson, living on Fourth avenue, was an eye-witness of the accident. Mr. Hutchison could not be found by a Post-Intelligencer reporter. Every one who knows Childs says that he is an extremely careful driver and that he cannot believe he was driving recklessly. It is true that he was on the wrong side of the street and the street is not very well lighted at the point where the collision occurred.

Young Schaffer recently bought out the Seattle dairy from John White. He kept his team at the Royal White, on Third and Third avenue, and bought his milk at the same place. He had owned the bicycles about ten days, and he had ridden for some time before. At the time he was very much thought of and highly respected.

LORD'S SON IN TROUBLE.

David Carnegie Sharp is the City Jail, charged with Being a Disorderly Person. A real live son of a lord, if his story is true, languishes in the city jail, like any other drunk and disorderly person. His name is David Carnegie Sharp, and he is high from Victoria.

The young man stands 4 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He is 23 years old, and wears his honors with the true dignity of a lord who believes that the earth was made for his use exclusively. His lordly manner and pompous demeanor stamps him as one born to command, and yesterday he was practicing his accomplishments in the lower part of the city.

The first thing he did, evidently, was to fill up with ale and 'alf and 'alf. Thus equipped, he strolled down Washington street. He soon found a friend and in a few minutes he had a drink with him. The drink was followed by another and another. Then they went into a restaurant near the corner of Washington street and Second avenue south. Here they tipped over the table and smashed dishes and terrified the female proprietor nearly to death. She was not used to the antics of this English scion of nobility and she protested, but got only the comforting assurance that she was entertaining the son of a lord.

Along in the middle of the afternoon the young man got tired and concluded to take a much-needed rest. He went into the Tremont hotel on Occidental avenue and sought out the parlor. Finding it a comfortable place, he partially disrobed and dozed off. He was awakened by a knock on the door, and he found some time later and asked to get out.

Then came an outburst of fury, so wrathful that it is hard to believe. The proprietor was called, and David, it is said, threatened to slay the entire house from hell by up to hand if they did not let him alone. He refused to leave, and Officer Hunt was called in to take charge of him.

On the way up in the patrol wagon the disturber confided to the latter that he little knew that he was arresting the son of a lord, and that he would be sorry for it before he was through with the business. At the police station, after answering the various questions put to those about him, he was committed to jail, he was asked for his occupation.

"Occupation? I have no occupation; I am a gentleman." And he looked down pityingly on the court officers about him who had only common plebeian blood in their veins.

David went down below and will sit in the row of petty convicts, beggars and drunks this morning before Judge Bogus. Among the papers which he had in his pocket when arrested was a summons directing him to appear before a magistrate in Victoria to answer to a charge of fast driving.

day by Judge Bogus for selling liquor without a license. Lind gave bonds in the sum of $100 and will appeal to the superior court.

The saloon is under the St. Paul house, which is full of a miscellaneous lot of people. Lind runs up and down stairs carrying drinks and empty bottles. Early yesterday morning Officer Adams went into the office of the hotel, which is on the second floor, and came across Lind, a woman named Mrs. Kelly and the night clerk of the hotel. They had a lot of liquor in bottles, some glasses and a tray. Mrs. Kelly is an officer that Lind had just called her a bottle of liquor in the morning and as Lind had no license to sell liquor the officer arrested him.

Judge Bogus's court room looked like it might be a barroom yesterday when the case was on trial. About a dozen bottles of liquor together with a tray, some glasses were there, and the mob of thirty spectators in the court room gazed admiringly at the exhibits.

Lind's mastery was very poor, in spite of the transactions of the night while Mrs. Kelly and the officer were very positive and definite as to particulars.

A Good Illustration of What Intelligent Work Will Do for Better Highways-Panched and Covered With Gravel-Dirty Roads.

"It lives eight miles from Redmond on the best country road in King county," was the proud remark of Hector McCullum, a farmer at Allyn and road supervisor of his district, who is at the Millier. "You will see soon millions of dollars' worth of your shoes. It is part of the road, twenty-nine miles long, which runs from Kirkland to North Bend. My brother, Hector McCullum, built these seven miles under contract in 1882 and 1884, and although practically no repairs have since been made on it, the entire stretch of ten miles is in good condition still."

"This road is practically level, sixteen feet wide in the clear and rounded so that it is eight inches higher at the crown than at the sides. In all the wet places it is punched and for the whole distance it is covered with gravel a foot deep. It is a good road, but the work was done below cost in order that we might get a road sooner. Rain or sunshine it is equally solid, and you can haul all a wagon will bear without sign of sinking. There is not a mud hole the whole length of it."

"It costs ten times as much to haul over a gravelled road, as to haul over a dirt road. Before this road was built, we had an old road of nothing but mud, barely passable for a wagon, and it took two days to get over it. Now, for two years, while on the new road, wagons pass every day. We now get more produce to market, for we can put it in the wagon and go ahead, because we have an outlet."

"We have given up building dirt roads in our part of the county. As district road supervisor, I have completed a new branch to Issaquah, to take the place of an old dirt road. The old road had grades of ten miles in length, and the new one goes around the bluff and has a maximum grade of 8 per cent, and is thoroughly gravelled. The difference in length is only seventy-two feet. "It is a disgrace to a civilized country like America to have dirt roads. We are making dirt roads in highways. "How would you improve the present system?"

"As far as my experience as supervisor goes, all that is to be said in money direct into the county treasury, all work should be let by contract and done under the supervision of a practical engineer. I have done this work for years, and let him have a practical road-builder under him to go over and inspect all work done in construction. I believe the state ought to build all main trunk roads, when they are built, turn them over to the counties through which they run, to be maintained by the counties. I think that after the county has a road built it would naturally keep it in good order."

"Our system is the same as they had in Scotland 100 years ago. Now in England they have a county council, which collects the taxes and turns those for each district over to the district board of road trustees, which meets every two months and serves without pay. This board has a practical road-builder under it, whose duty it is to oversee the work. The district is divided into sections, in which the work is let out by contract for the year. The road trustee pays for the work, and the contractor is allowed a certain percentage, always holding back enough till the end of the year. Then, if the contractor has done his work in good faith, according to the contract, he is paid in full; if not, the trustees will put men on to do the work under the supervision of the road supervisor, and deduct the cost from the contract price. The supervisor is generally the most practical man they can find."

"Under some good system in this country there is no need to take money from highway funds, especially in Western Washington, for here we have the material necessary. Gravel is abundant; anywhere you wish to place a culvert, there is gravel there is the cedar to last for generations; there is plenty of fir to build bridges, and there is plenty of stone for culverts. In every grade, every grade can be obtained anywhere."
