

BADLY BEATEN AND ROBBED.

Highwayman "Sticks Up" Otto Miller and Get $263.

VICTIM FEARFULLY MALTREATED

Lured Out on the Lake Washington Bicycle Path by a Supposed Steerer, a Man in a Mask Comes Out of the Woods and Holds Him Up—Miller Resists, is Nearly Killed and His Sack of Gold Taken.

Otto Miller, an old man whose thin hair is silvery white, was enticed into the woods near the Madison street bridge yesterday afternoon and robbed of $263 by a masked highwayman. Miller fought to save his gold, and in the presence of his false friend was knocked down upon the ground and beaten with the butt of a pistol. There are twelve distinct wounds on his head; his right eye is closed and the skin is puffed out around it to the size of a hen's egg. His left eye is badly discolored and will also be closed. After the highwayman had completed his murderous job he ran away, leaving his victim lying in a pool of blood. When Miller reached police headquarters he was so badly disfigured and blood-stained that his best friend could not have recognized him. Miller does not know the name of the man who "steered" him into the woods, but says that he can identify him.

Otto Miller is a resident of Stayton, Or., a town near Salem. He owns property the income from which is sufficient to support him in a modest way. He says that while he is usually called Miller, and registered at the Queen City hotel as such, his real name is Otto Luettich. His age is 59 years. Three weeks ago he came to Seattle and since that time has been enjoying himself in a quiet way, drinking some, but not enough to bring him under the observation of the police. Officer Jack Barok has seen him around the Star saloon, on Washington street, on several occasions.

About eight days ago Miller became acquainted at the Queen City hotel with a tall man who has a brown mustache, florid complexion, and hair that is curly and black. Unfortunately, Miller did not take the trouble to ascertain his name, although he allowed himself to be drawn into an acquaintanceship. Wednesday afternoon the tall man crossed the long bridge and then turned to the south along the bicycle path. Nothing happened on this trip, although Miller had $200 in gold in a sack that was sewed into his pocket.

About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, as near as can be ascertained, the tall man again persuaded Miller to go out with him. They walked along Madison street, according to Miller's story, until they reached the same point where they had turned off the day before.

"We went that way yesterday," said the tall man; "I guess we will take the other walk today." He referred to the bicycle path road. It commences on the north side of Madison street, at the end of the bridge. Miller says they walked along the path through the woods for about a mile, when a good-sized man, dressed in gray, his face concealed by a mask of the same color, jumped out from the bushes and striking a long pistol in his hand, said: "Throw up your hands."

Instead of obeying the command Miller poked his umbrella into the robber's face at the same time time grabbing the hand which held the pistol. The robber was then struck at this unexpected resistance and before he could attack him Miller called on his tall friend to help him. "He will shoot me," replied the man, who made no attempt to stay the murderous hand which was now raised on high to crush the life out of the old man. Miller was courageous, but had not the physical strength to withstand the attack of the masked man, who crushed him down to the ground and then jumped on him. With one hand pressed closely around Miller's throat he prevented an outcry, and with the other he held his pistol as a club. Twelve times he brought it down savagely on the poor old man's head, and each time blood spouted forth from the wound. Then he pounded his victim on the face, blackening his eyes and smashing the holes in his mask. He turned him on a side and then, as the victim ceased the rage in the eyes of the murderous robber blazed forth through the bushes closer around the old man's neck and pressed his knee relentlessly into his stomach. The crowd of blood on the ground became larger. The victim lay stretched out, limp and helpless. Then the robber went through Miller's pockets. From one he took $5 in silver, from another some small change and a few foreign coins, and then from the hip pocket he removed a sack containing $200 in gold. With a hurried kick he turned and made his way rapidly along the path the same way that Miller had come.

Miller says that although he was helpless he still retained his senses, and the robber and his supposed friend went away together. After being left alone Miller picked his way slowly and with trembling steps back to the Queen City hotel, where he was picked up by the first Madison street car that came along. He got off at Third avenue and was staggering along the street. A terrible sight to behold, when a reporter saw him and guided his footsteps to police headquarters.

Captain Sullivan and Sergeant Peier tried to talk with Miller, but soon discovered that he could not speak a word of English. Officer Richards, who has a fair knowledge of German, managed to get the main points in the story from him, and later, when another Shoneman arrived, other points were added. The story that Miller told the officers is given above. While the police believed from the first that it was a case of enticing a victim into the woods for another man to rob, the case was made much clearer when Miller said that the robber and his (Miller's) supposed friend went away together. Another very significant point was detected in the action of the man who refused to assist a friend because he might be shot.

While Miller was telling his story Dr. C. A. Smith was washing off the thick coating of blood which covered his head and face. After this was done the doctor became convinced from the condition of the wounds on the top of the head, twelve in number, that it was best for Miller to go to the hospital. This was explained to him, and he said "Sour good." Dr. Smith bandaged up his head temporarily, and he was taken to Providence hospital, by Sergeant Laubacher. It was the opinion of the doctor from his first examination that while the wounds were all of a pronounced type, the skin being cut down to the skull, he did not think that there was an actual fracture.

Captain Sullivan detailed Detectives Williams and Meredith on the case, and they immediately visited the Queen City hotel. After this was done the Miller had been staying. The clerk said that he knew Miller by sight, but had not become personally acquainted with him, as he did not speak English. He said Miller was a quiet

SERVICES AT THE CHURCHES.

Christmas Trees and Christmas Carols Tonight—Midnight Masses and Musical Programmes—Buildings Beautifully Decorated—Choirs With Special Training and Appropriate Orchestral Accompaniment.

Never was a more joyous Christmas-tide observed in Seattle than that which will be celebrated tonight and tomorrow. All day yesterday the streets and stores were gay with shoppers bent on some special Christmas purchase. There were groups looking after fittings for a Christmas tree. There were committees delegated to provide a whole church or Sunday school with gifts. Father and mother were filling Santa's sleigh for the little tots at home. Lone individuals, negotiating secret purchases on the sly, hardly letting their left hands know what their right hands were doing, went peeping about through the bazaars and book stores and jewelry stores in search of something suitable. Long hours were spent in solving the vexed problem of just the right thing to buy.

The same scenes will be repeated and intensified today. And tonight little stockings will be hung alike from the marble mantel and from the rough jamb of the shack in mute expectation of the time-honored visit of Santa Claus. Little colored candles will scintillate from the swaying evergreen boughs and will wink knowingly at the bright-faced urchins gathered around. Around the family fireside the season will bring up reminiscences of other Christmas days, now long gone by. Thoughts of the old home and "the way we used to do" will come with halcyon memories.

The weather man says "rain" for today; but then he prophesied fair weather for yesterday, and all sanguine hearts will hope that one mistake will offset the other. The temperature, just bracing enough to be not chilly, would be a surprise to Eastern people if they could look in on Seattle today, where green grass and good health give the lie to the old proverb that a green Christmas makes a fat churchyard.

Today and tonight will be a busy time throughout the city. The last sales and the last purchases must be made by people who have put off such things to the last moment. Housekeepers and caterers will be busy getting ready for the coming feast. The postoffice people will be still busier with ever increasing loads of mail going and coming with its good wishes and souvenirs for Christmas and New Year. The express clerks and drivers will be breathless with handling the piles of packages little and big.

Not the least busy of all are the church people. For them, rain or shine, Christmas is in the air, and the second of the two great festivals of the Christian year must have its proper observance. Many of the Sunday schools will have Christmas trees tonight, and in several of the churches there will be special services, musical and religious, besides the more elaborate services of tomorrow, more specific announcements of which will appear in tomorrow morning's paper.

Trinity Parish. The decorations in Trinity Parish church are on an extensive scale, many workers having been busy since the early part of the week in beautifying the sacred edifice with wreathing and devices appropriate to the occasion.

The choir, under the direction of Prof. H. S. Sharpe, has also been busy rehearsing for the various services of the day and the music both tonight and tomorrow will be very fine. The choir will be reinforced by an orchestra which will accompany the morning services tomorrow, while at the midnight service tonight the choir will be reinforced by a choir composed entirely of male voices. The programme for tonight, beginning at 11:45 o'clock, is as follows: "Veni Emmanuel," Kyrie—No. 33, Beethoven.

Offertory—Solo, "The Star of Bethlehem," Mr. W. Sterling. "Christus Natus Est," by M. A. Melvil, will be the offertory, and the triumphant notes of "Gaudete," by Diabelli, will conclude the service. The offertory, by Rev. Father Lindner, C. S. R., will deliver a sermon appropriate to Christmas.

Solemn high mass will then begin, with Rev. William Lindner, C. S. R., celebrating the Sacred Host. Immediately on the stroke of midnight the advent of the Star will be heralded by the beautiful chorale "The Angel's Call," performed by Mr. Wagner with organ accompaniment, by Miss Ethel Eckerly, and the exquisite vocal trio, "Lullaby to the Infant Jesus," by Rev. Father Lindner, C. S. R., and Miss Elvira Natus Est," by M. A. Melvil, will be the offertory, and the triumphant notes of "Gaudete," by Diabelli, will conclude the service. The offertory, by Rev. Father Lindner, C. S. R., will deliver a sermon appropriate to Christmas.

The interior of the church has been decorated in a most beautiful manner which is eminently suggestive of the cheerfulness and gladness attending the birth of the Redeemer. Festoons and garlands of evergreens, holly, and holly leaves, and the sanctuary, all round the church and choir gallery trees are tastefully distributed, and the lady altar and high altar are carried in almost a perfect circle of flowers and candles arranged to the best advantage.

Joseph Carpenter has painted the scenery for the crib and designed the crib itself, which, with its gorgeous distribution of candle and colored lights, and the drift arrangement of the effigies of the participants in this humble yet infinitely touching drama of Christ's coming, will give the best on the eve of Christmas at midnight.

Apart from the crib, the two ensemble viewed from the back of the church, is very pleasing; the permanent decorations, the festoons stained windows, and in the recessed dimness of the sanctuary the air of the decorations of the hour has a most devotional and artistic effect. Altogether the congregation of the Sacred Host have reason to be proud and delighted with their place of worship.

Our Lady of Good Help. Special preparations have been made for the celebration of the midnight mass tonight at the Church of Our Lady of Good Help, corner of Fourth avenue north and Washington street. Rev. Father Prefontaine officiating. The choir will be composed of the following voices: Soprano, Miss Clara Tester, Miss T. Spray, Miss Nellie Russell, Mrs. L. Huggin, Mrs. Wallace; alto, Mrs. F. Louise Perry, Miss Della Spray, Miss Wilma Allender, Miss May Pickering, tenors, Mr. Frank Coombs, Mr. J. Nolan, Mr. J. F. Flemer, basses, Mr. M. Booth, Mr. George Mitchell, Mr. M. V. H. H. Leland, Jr., Miss Winifred Andrews presides at the organ and Prof. A. Lueben is musical director. Tonight Carl Maria von Weber's Second Mass in B flat will be sung, and the following special numbers: Adele Fiedels, solo and chorus; "Noel, Noel" offertory, and "Veni Creator," grand chorus.

The Immaculate Conception. At the Church of the Immaculate Conception, corner of Broadway and Madison street, grand mass will be celebrated at midnight tonight with a full choir and orchestra. There will be a short address by the pastor. Following is the musical programme: "Noel," Miss M. Chisholm, to be followed by Sig. Gloria's Grand Mass No. 1. Kyrie. Gloria and 9:30 and 9 o'clock the pastoral mass, in which the children will join, singing Christmas carols with their own orchestral accompaniment. High mass will be celebrated at 10:30 a. m. by Rev. Father Cronin, who will also preach, at Trinity Parish, St. Mark's, Our Lady of Good Help and various other churches there will also be early morning services.

The English Lutheran. The English Lutherans will hold an early service on Christmas at their church on the corner of Seventh avenue and Union street. The services will commence at 7 a. m. and consist of a sermon—subject, "The Angel's Message From Heaven or 'The First Christmas Sermon'—and the full liturgy with two solos, "Bethlehem," soprano, by Miss Hammer, and "The Manger Cradle," bass, by Mr. Erickson. The children's Christmas service will be held in the evening, commencing at 6 o'clock, for which an elaborate programme has been prepared. The decorations surpass those of former years.

THE SALVATION ARMY. The New Ensign From St. Paul Making Ready for the Christmas Dinner to the Poor.

Ensign F. W. Jewell, recently of St. Paul, who, with his wife, has taken charge of the Salvation Army work in this city, has been meeting with great success in his new field, as he and his brother did in St. Paul. The Jewells have been drawing large crowds with their singing and exhortations. The room has been crowded at every meeting and twenty-two converts have been made since their arrival here two weeks ago.

Ensign Jewell comes of a family that has become famous in this line of work. He is the oldest of seven sons, all of whom are members, five of them officers, in the Salvation Army. They are all good singers, and Ensign Jewell's wife, to whom he was married in St. Paul about two years ago, had been a choir singer in the Methodist church from the time she was twelve years of age. She possesses good musical talent.

Ensign Jewell is 31 years of age. He was born in Toronto, Canada, and came to Michigan with his parents in 1882. Nine years ago he learned the barber trade at Ann Arbor, Mich., and later on opened a barber shop of his own at Shboyan. He soon became converted to the Salvation Army, gave up his business and has since been devoting his time to the movement.

He was the first of the seven brothers to take a step in the line of Christian work, but since then the other six have become converted to the army.

The Salvation Army is preparing to give a free Christmas dinner at the corner of Second avenue and Yaeler way tomorrow.

FIRE AT MORAN'S. Good work by the firemen yesterday morning at Moran Bros' foundry saved the greater part of $75,000 worth of patterns from destruction. About 9:40 o'clock fire broke out in the pattern room. Chief Kellough thinks that it was caused by a defective flue and the stacking of patterns too near a terra cotta pipe. An alarm was sent in from box 41. When the firemen reached the foundry the building was filled with black smoke, through which the men had to go in order to get at the heart of the fire. It took them only a short time to settle the matter and the bell sounded "out."
