

KELOGG'S REPORT.

During 1897 Fire Department Responded to 169 Alarms.

LOSS OF PROPERTY NOT LARGE.

Present Salaries, the Chief States, Are Inadequate and Should Be Increased at Once—Rates of Insurance Have Not Been Reduced—City Electrician Plinkney Makes an Important Recommendation.

The annual report of Chief Kellogg, of the fire department, and City Electrician Plinkney were completed yesterday afternoon. They are voluminous documents, and show the workings of the departments in every way and shape.

The fire department responded to 169 alarms during 1897, as compared with 203 for 1896. Of these, 55 were received from boxes, 23 by telephone and 21 still, in addition to the foregoing, four fires were discovered by members of the department, three of which were extinguished without calling out the apparatus.

Losses and insurance during the year were as follows: Losses on buildings, $25,748.50; losses on contents, $45,224.30; insurance on buildings, $48,650; insurance on contents, $42,624; value of buildings, $42,300; value of contents, $1,245,600; insurance paid, $38,883.30; loss for year, $29,072.30.

According to the table, the loss per capita, during Seattle's population at 70,000, was 40-100 of a dollar. The loss on the property endangered was 1-15 of 1 per cent.

What Kellogg Says. "It is with no little pride," says Chief Kellogg, "that I refer to the above figures. Few are aware of the disadvantages attending the efforts of the department; long distances, heavy grades, and in the outside districts an insufficient water supply have its report of losses that materially add to the percentages given. With the single exception of the Kerry mill fire, no serious losses have been sustained in the business or manufacturing portion of the city. This is largely due to the quick work of the department. Unfriendly criticisms have been made at the speed the apparatus is driven going to fires. I have no knowledge of such criticisms having been made by those whose property was endangered. A delay of ten seconds at the Stevens hotel fire would, instead of a loss less than $200, have resulted in a loss of not less than $25,000, and probably $250,000.

These conditions prevail," continues Chief Kellogg, "only when there is not a full understanding of the necessities governing the proposed legislation, and can be remedied, and the best results obtained, only by closer business relations between the heads of the several departments and the law-making authorities. It is not pleasant for the head of any department to review the actions of his superiors or criticize their actions, in detail, but when the service is liable to suffer by reason of his silence he then becomes simply a figurehead. Neither does it follow that the head of a department is necessarily correct in his conclusions, so I believe that the service can be rightly determined by investigation, aided by personal consultations between the legislative branch and those having in charge the carrying out of its edicts and ordinances.

The Salary Question. "Not much remains to be said on the subject of salaries. That the salaries are inadequate none will deny. The cut that was made in the salaries heretofore paid was regarded by all in the department at the time as a necessity, and was cheerfully acquiesced in. It is fondly hoped that the removal of property and branches of business will reach our department. I have already furnished your honorable body a proposition which contemplates a classification of companies into first and second grades, and a corresponding scale of salaries which provides for payment in proportion to experience and ability. A maximum and a minimum salary is established. A yearly increase is provided for until the maximum is reached.

We are now at the end of the second year of civil service. In this department enough has been learned by experience to demonstrate its adaptability to the requirements of the service. After showing at length how the minor details of the system are counterbalanced by the advantages, the chief concludes with the following: "It should be enough to satisfy any citizen to know that only individual merit is considered in department membership, a condition unknown prior to the introduction of civil service.

Seattle is about to witness an era of prosperity following the five years of depression which has afflicted the municipality and the citizens alike; the citizen is moving to take advantage of the opportunities constantly developing. It is imperative that the municipality be wakened to the necessity of following the rapid increase in population and buildings.

From the city council, the fire department and the water department, the conclusion is in a great measure the success of the several departments, and I have no doubt that a faithful presentation of the department's necessities will result in such action as will render possible the utmost benefits to be derived.

The Fremont Hose Company. "By agreement with the Fremont Mill Company, the city council (in lieu of other facilities for water in event of fire) pays the mill company 25 a day to maintain steam for working the pumps in case of fire. This agreement was intended and has in its time proved a protection. It is essential that the hose company be provided with sufficient water service. It would certainly be as wise to have no steam pressure to work the pumps as to have no hose to use in connection therewith. The latter proposition is the condition of things in Fremont today, and has been for a long time. The fire protection in Fremont is protection only in name. I cannot too earnestly request that the city council be induced to purchase for the protection of that exposed portion of the city."

The chief says that when engine company No. 5 was put in service, the fire insurance companies promised to reduce rates. They have not done so, and in defense allege that the number of fires in the company is too small and that as there is only one team for the engine and hose wagon, efficient service cannot be rendered. "There can be no valid denial of the facts set out by the insurance companies," says the chief. "I would urge the employment of three more men and the purchase of a team.

Deficiencies on Electric Wire. "Numerous fires have been caused by defective wiring. At present there are no restrictions in running electric wires or methods employed. Sooner or later disastrous fires will result. While much of the mischief is already done, stringent legislation will prevent adding to the already dangerous risks, not only to property, but to life. The appointment of a city electrician with full authority over such matters would offset much of the danger."

The work of secretary of the department is performed by a messenger detailed from a company. The work requires one man's full time. The chief recommends that the position of "secretary" be established and a salary provided.

"The condition of engine house No. 2," says Chief Kellogg, "is deplorable by reason of rotting away of the foundation and settling of the structure. The material for the roof is at hand, ready to be laid as soon as the necessary work on the foundation is finished and the house raised. An estimate of cost was made months ago, but no action was taken. The work is a necessity, and the longer delayed the greater the expense."

During the year only one citizen was injured at a fire. This accident took place on the night of April 7, corner of Second avenue south and Weller street, where a roomer, in endeavoring to save his effects, was badly burned, but finally recovered. Accidents to firemen were as follows: Albert Foster, substitute, leg broken while attempting to jump on wagon responding to an alarm; William Biege, driver, caught between rear end of truck and a partition, incapacitated for several weeks; John Hoy, burned on head and hands while holding pipe at Kerry mill fire; Bert Boatman, injured by boiling tar, while repairing Battery street house. Several minor accidents occurred, but serious enough to incapacitate men from service.

Loss of Life and Property. City Electrician Plinkney in his report says that the plan of placing small boxes with glass fronts, containing a key near each alarm box, has materially increased the efficiency of the alarm system. Under recommendations, he says: "For the past five years I have recommended that a six-circuit repeater be purchased, so that the existing circuits may be cut in two. Again I call the attention of your honorable body to this important need. When loss of property, and perhaps life, occur, I think the responsibility will be placed where it belongs."

"I advocate the adoption of a storage battery plant to displace the gravity battery system now in use. This would be a step in keeping with improvements being made. From an economical standpoint it should be adopted."

Reliable statistics show that Seattle, in the United States, has the largest number of alarm stations than any other city in the United States. It has less than Tacoma, Spokane and Portland.

The great amount of rebuilding by telephone and electric companies has necessitated considerable work on the police and fire alarm systems this summer."

Resigns a Good Position. James Griffiths, local manager of the N. Y. K. Going to the Alaska Transportation Business.

The resignation of James Griffiths as local manager of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha has been forwarded to St. Paul, and in event of its acceptance the agency will become vacant. Much speculation is being indulged in in railroad circles as to Griffiths' probable successor. The position will be filled by the Great Northern, with the concurrence of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

The resignation of Mr. Griffiths is due to his connection with the recently organized company which has purchased the steamer Takasago in Yokohama and will operate her on the Alaska run. Others interested are Moritz Thomsen, president of the Centennial Mill Company, and Thomas L. Greenow and Peter Larson, well known mining men.

The Takasago was purchased at $50,000. She has been rechristened the Centennial, and has been placed under the Danish flag. She will leave Yokohama early in February for Seattle. Here she will be refitted. Her present accommodations for 60 passengers and sixty-five cabin passengers will be almost trebled. Owing to her sailing under the Danish flag the Takasago will be run from Vancouver.

It is the intention of the company to engage in the Alaska trade in the summer and in the Hawaiian trade in the winter. The ship is now in drydock at Yokohama, and will come out in first-class condition for travel. As soon as refitted at Seattle she will commence her route via Eva, Seattle and Skagway, making a round trip once every two weeks. After several trips, she will be sent on a trip to St. Michael. It is probable that she will make several trips to that station, and will operate her on the Alaska run, after the season closes, will start on her southern route.

The Centennial, as she is now known, is a British built iron steamship of 2,500 tons, and was built for the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company, but was purchased in Japan and has been on the route between England and that country. She is said to be admirably adapted to the requirements of the trade.

BREVITIES. D. N. Hukill will lecture at the Volunteers' armory, 118 1/2 Second, on the evening of the 27th, on the topics of the day. The temperance lodges are invited to have a representative present.

John Morse, of Billings, Mont., who fired the first shot in the air on Washington street early Sunday morning, while under the influence of liquor, is now in the hands of Judge Austin's court yesterday afternoon.

The usual open meeting of Stevens post will be held in R. hall, Hinekey street, this evening, when a short programme of vocal and instrumental music will be given, and the time will be spent in games and dancing.

PARTIES bound for Alaska should take at least twenty dollars in silver quarters, halves and dollars along with them, as it is very scarce in that country and the inability to make exact change frequently results in making out the party of packers, boatmen and others, often resulting in compelling parties to pay from fifty cents to two or three dollars in excess of regular rates.

IOWA Iron Works, Limited, Dubuque, Ia., build the best machinery for river steamers and make a specialty of building sectional steel hulls, which can be easily shipped and quickly bolted together. Builders of all kinds of marine machinery and boilers. Represented by F. A. Hill, with Hibbard & Norton Co., Yesler dock, Seattle.

NORTHERN PACIFIC time card changes January 23. On and after that date two trains daily from Seattle to Portland, leaving at 9:30 a. m. and 4 p. m. Dining car service on both trains.

to the local office that he will return to Seattle about March 1. E. M. Wilson, one of Fairhaven's most prominent citizens, is registered at the Brunswick.

A. J. Agnew, a prominent hardware dealer of Everett, mingled with friends in the city yesterday. W. E. Stevens, of the Stevens Hotel Company, has gone to Grand Rapids, Mich., on business.

J. A. Matheson, who owns the Anacortes hall, is in the city on business and registered at the Stevens. F. A. Allen, general freight and passenger agent of the Seattle & International, returned last night from Vancouver, B. C.

Among the arrivals at the Brunswick is a party of mining men from Virginia City, Mont., who will go north on the Excelsior. James Anderson, contracting freight agent of the Canadian Pacific railway, has returned after a business trip to the Kettle river country.

Mr. Dearborn has been in New York city for the past two months in conference with capitalists on the sale or lease of his water frontage for wharfage purposes. He also had several interviews with the Tramps of Philadelphia. He says they are pushing work on five ocean steamers of 3,200 to 3,500 tons for the Alaska trade.

Mr. Dearborn met Andrew F. Burelich, president of the Yukon Company, of Seattle, at their offices in Philadelphia. This company has a magnificent display of articles labeled Dawson via Seattle in the windows of a sixty-foot frontage on Chestnut street, near the Continental hotel, and are advertising extensively. He is to be interviewed with Joseph Ladue at his offices in New York city. Mr. Ladue said he would arrive in Seattle within ten days and open offices.

Charles E. Coogan and Edward O'Donnell, of Chicago, who made a flying trip to Dawson last summer, arrived from Juneau yesterday on the steamer City of Topeka. They have been examining some mining properties on the southeastern coast of Alaska, a district with which they are both greatly pleased. They spent several days on Baranof Island examining a new ledge of quartz that has been uncovered on the shore of the island. The ore has not yet been assayed. Said Mr. O'Donnell last night: "I believe that the mineral belt on the southeastern coast of Alaska will prove to be the greatest quartz mining district in the country. The region has not yet been prospected, while the mines that have been developed have proven great dividend payers."

Cyrus F. Clapp, of Port Townsend, Ia, Seattle, on a flying business trip to the northwest counties are beginning to take some interest in matters political," he said yesterday. "The members of the Republican Association formed in that part of the state soon after the last Republican state convention are beginning to watch matters. They are getting together and are already beginning to figure on approaching events. I do not know what the northern party will do, but I think they will have a good reason for believing that there will be unity of action and cohesion of purpose on the part of the delegates from that section."

Day Clerk Benedict of the Northern is not a benedict in the common noun sense of that word. He is old enough, but he looks very youthful. Thereby hangs a tale. The other day a stately dame swept into the Northern lobby and approached the desk. She had not met Mr. Benedict and seeing him at the desk she took him for a boy. "Little boy," said she, "when the clerk comes to tell him to make out my bill." Since then Benedict has started to grow a moustache, and the boys around the Northern smile quickly. Mr. Benedict is popular enough to smile at their smiles.

John Y. Ostrander, a prominent Democrat, formerly connected with the Seattle land office, has tendered his resignation as United States commissioner for the district of Alaska, with headquarters at Juneau, and will start early in February for the Klondike. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Ostrander and by Dr. and Mrs. Wyman, also of Juneau.

F. W. Clark, of Everett, together with his father, is at the Brunswick. Fred T. Merrill, the bicycle man, arrived in Seattle from Portland last night. F. Faskett, a prominent citizen of Anacortes, Mont., is a guest at the Hotel Broadway.
