The coroner's jury which investigated the death of Frankie Davenport Saturday, decided that death was due to narcotic poison administered by Dan McMillan. Coroner Yandell remanded McMillan to jail and left the matter in the hands of Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Hart to decide what action he will take.

The inquest was held yesterday afternoon at Butterworth's undertaking rooms. Doctors Mitchell, Bones and James Shannon, who attended the woman at the St. Paul house Friday afternoon, testified that she died of morphia poisoning.

"I know I'll be dead," "I don't let him do it again." "I'm drunk and don't care." "Ole Walstein, a porter at the St. Paul, testified seeing McMillan go into Miss Davenport's room at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon and lock the door.

McMillan attended the inquest. At first he would not stir out of his cell until he got a "shot." Finally he consented to attend, but insisted on having fifty cents worth of cocaine and morphine before he would present himself.

His statement to the jury was made voluntarily and was as follows: "I have used morphine eighteen years, but I never got into the habit of using it until I was shot during the Apache war, where I use $2 to $3 worth of cocaine and morphine daily to keep me from going crazy."
