

HER PATHEIC PETITION.

Mrs. Dawson Will Continue as Custodian of Her Children.

CASE BEFORE JUDGE JACOBS.

Original Decree Made by Judge James Somewhat Modified, and as a Result Dr. L. R. Dawson Will Not Be Given His Children for Many Months to Come—Dr. and Mrs. Dawson Testify on Stand.

The pathetic petition of Mrs. Mamie C. Dawson, the divorced wife of Dr. Lewis R. Dawson, for an extension of the time during which she shall have the custody of her two little boys under the decree of divorce was yesterday granted by Judge Jacobs, who ordered that she have their charge until July, 1939. This is substantially all that Mrs. Dawson asked.

The hearing on the petition was devoid of sensational features, but the presence of the two little boys, Lewis, who is almost 8, and Ralph, who is between 6 and 7 years old, in the court room, kept things from being dull. The children were very much in evidence and caused no little amusement by their childish infringements of court room etiquette. One of those which was appreciated by the audience, which gathered to hear the proceedings, was when one of the boys, in the midst of an argument upon some abstract legal proposition, ran briskly up the steps to the judge's bench, and leaning on the arm of the big armchair, inquired in a piping treble voice: "Say, are you busy now?"

Judge Jacobs patted the boy on the head and he was then removed by the bailiff. By the original decree in the case each one of the boys was to remain in the custody of Mrs. Dawson until he should be 18 years old. Lewis will be 8 in May next, and Mrs. Dawson petitioned that her custody over him should be continued until Ralph, also, was 8, and so long thereafter as the court might see fit. She argued in her petition that Lewis had consumptive tendencies and needed a great deal of attention, which Dr. Dawson would not be so able to give him as she would. Her testimony was to the same effect yesterday, and she was corroborated by her witnesses. Dr. Dawson and his witnesses denied that the boy was sick, and the doctor claimed to be entirely competent to take care of him. Judge Jacobs, after hearing the evidence, ruled that Mrs. Dawson was entitled to the custody of both boys until the younger should be 8 years old, which would be in July, 1939, subject to the control of the court.

LOST HIS MONEY.

A Man From Minnesota Who Could Not Recognize Hunko Men.

Iver Strand is one of a party of forty Klondikers from Minnesota. The party is registered at the National hotel. Strand had $100 in bills. There were three strangers in the hotel. Strand is out this morning and the police have two men at the city jail.

This is a brief synopsis of a story that developed yesterday at police headquarters. It is not new and will be ever old as long as people with money allow men of sharp wits to entice them into a game of cards. The three men were sharper, and Mr. Strand, their victim, knows something of the ways of a great city.

Strand followed and, of course, lost track of the other two confidence men. Arrived at the Butler hotel, the stranger asked Strand to wait a minute till he went inside and had the check indorsed by the clerk. Then he would give him the money.

Strand waited while the young stranger hurried into the hall. A minute later he returned, again realizing that he was victimized, rushed into the hotel, but just a moment after the stranger had disappeared down the stairs leading to the James street entrance.

William Kelly is the name of a man whom the police arrested as being one of the flimflammers. He was identified by Strand and locked up. The police have two other men under surveillance.

THE PASSING THROG.

Tiny wrinkles of care soon gather on the brows of Alaska ticket agents. Young men age rapidly under the strain of business. Those who wonder why this is so should stand in a ticket office on the eve of the departure of an Alaska steamer and note the number and character of questions shot at the clerk. A sample dialogue of what occurs hundreds of times weekly took place between Ticket Agent Carl Stoltenberg yesterday and an inquiring Easterner. He was dressed in the approved costume of the fortune hunter, and said aside his wide white hat as he said: "How do?"

"Where to?" "Alaska." "What point?" "Oh, any place. Where do your boats call?" "Wrangell, Juneau, Skagway, Dyea." "Well, what is it to Dyea?" "First class $30, second class $25." "Will the fares be reduced?" "No, those are best rates." "Yes." "Any reduction to parties?" "Two." "No, no reduction." "What's the freight?" "Anything you ship as such." "To Dyea, $18.50 per measurement ton, forty cubic feet to the ton. This rate includes Seattle wharfage and landing charges at Dyea." "Why, $18.50 per ton of forty cubic feet?" "Well, how's that?" "What do you mean?" "Somebody told me it was $13."

"The $5 additional is for lighterage at Dyea." "Well, that's funny." "Yes, Hal! hal!" "Does that land the freight?" "Yes." "How long does it take to get there?" "About four days." "Are you sure?" "Do you think she will?" "Yes. Can't I give you a ticket for nothing? Next!"

A special Northern Pacific train arrived in the city yesterday morning, having on board President C. S. Mellen, General Manager J. W. Kendrick, E. H. McHenry, chief engineer; E. M. Herr, superintendent of motive power; W. G. Pearce, assistant general superintendent; E. J. Pierson, superintendent of the Pacific division; C. S. Bihler, division engineer, and H. H. Warner, master mechanic. In Seattle the party was joined by General Manager L. S. Miller, of the Seattle & International, and Newman Kline, superintendent of the Seattle & International. The train then made a tour over the Seattle & International, it being the first official inspection of the road that President Mellen has given this road, of which he is president and chairman of the board of directors.

C. T. Wernecke, a furrier on Columbia dock, left yesterday morning for San Francisco to purchase buckskin to carry out a contract that he has made with North American Transportation and Trading Company for gold sacks. Some estimate of what the big Chicago corporation will do may be made from the specification of the contract, which call for 800 bags capable of holding 500 ounces (314 pounds) each, or a total of 400,000 ounces worth at a conservative estimate $3,000,000. A bagatelle of twelve and a half tons.

Mr. Whitney L. Boise, a prominent attorney of Portland, and ex-chairman of the state Republican central committee, and Mr. C. S. Jackson, editor of the Pendleton East Oregonian, the leading newspaper of Eastern Oregon, are among the visitors to the city.

M. G. Hale, of Portland, superintendent of the Northern Pacific Express Company, arrived in Seattle yesterday morning from the south.

HART ADVISING THE JURY.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Is Now on the "Inside."

HAS THERE BEEN COMPROMISE?

Judge Benson Refused Some Time Ago to Allow the Prosecuting Attorney to Act as the Legal Adviser of the Grand Jury, but Things Have Changed Since Then—There May Be a Report Today.

Doubt as to the legality of the action of Judge Benson in appointing S. D. King and Assistant Attorney-General T. M. Vance as special counsel to represent the state in the grand jury room during the jury's present investigation still linger, and Prosecuting Attorney McElroy, who considers that he was not fairly treated when he was supplanted in the performance of the duties of his office, only smiles a broad smile and looks woe when any one suggests the fact to him. Until very recently the prosecuting attorney's refusal to sign the indictment, or what the grand jury is doing, but yesterday it came to light that Assistant Prosecuting Attorney John B. Hart has been called in to assist the special counsel in the grand jury investigation. This can bear two interpretations—one that a true has been patched up between the special counsel and the prosecuting attorney's office, and the other that the prosecuting attorney has forced his much recognition out of the special counsel. All parties are silent on the subject.

The fact that the special counsel are uncertain of their legal status is admitted by Judge Benson, who signed an order yesterday setting out at greater length than in his former order the exact duties of the special prosecutors, and specifying name by name the alleged law suits which are the subject of the investigation. It seems from Judge Benson's statement that these points were not specifically covered in the former order. The new order was not filed by Mr. King, and an inspection of its contents was refused, but it exists just the same.

Judge Benson says he is firmly convinced that the appointment of the special counsel was entirely legal, but does not deny that many other good lawyers think differently. He said yesterday that he was sorry the matter had not been carried to the supreme court by Mr. McElroy, who is the attorney general, as should the appointment turn out to be illegal, the work of the grand jury in connection with the warrant swindles would be invalidated. He said the question could only be finally decided upon a writ of certiorari, or upon an indictment in one of the road warrant cases.

The judge further stated that the special counsel were now limited in their duties to the grand jury room, and that no scandals only, in which he had held Mr. McElroy disqualified to prosecute. At first they investigated other cases also, and all other business coming before the grand jury, and that the special counsel are still retained, has caused no little unfavorable comment among those cognizant of the fact, who say that the county is being put to needless expense. Judge Benson emphatically denies that the county will lose anything by the matter. He says that the court will pass upon the question as to whether or not Mr. King and Mr. Vance, being an employee of the state as assistant attorney general, would receive no additional compensation from the county. Mr. King would be paid for the time actually expended, the judge hinted.

The grand jury, those about the court house say, seems to be a most erratic body and mixes investigations of all sorts in its proceedings. On Thursday it was the gambling evil, with road warrant scandal on the side. Yesterday the road warrant cases were over again, and the charge of murder against Mr. McElroy was taken up. On Friday it was the poisoning of Frankie Davenport a week ago, also came in for a share of the jury's attention, and several witnesses in the case, including Clara Dunlap, to whom the woman made threats of suicide, were examined.

The jury will undoubtedly report today, as Judge Benson instructed it some time ago not to remain in session longer.

TRUTH BEATS DIPLOMACY.

Trap Into Which the Latter Would Have Led Dupuy de Lome.

The late Senator Plumb, of Kansas, once described diplomacy as "gilded lying." It is a word which has been used in many one point in the Dupuy letter incident. It relates the Globe-Democrat. The Spanish minister held his own counsel until late in the afternoon of the day his letter to the United States was published. He got a question whether diplomacy might not have helped him out of the scrape. When the letter was first read in Washington there was general skepticism. Several papers carried publication with the assertion that it was a forgery, and even quoted the minister as so branding it. But the surprise to Mr. Dupuy de Lome came when the telegram boy brought to him the reading of this effort from the minister's pen. He said: "I have seen the letter which you are reported to have written to me. It is a base forgery." Mr. Dupuy was amazed. He called back: "Is it possible that you did not receive the letter?" Canalejas replied: "I never received such a letter from you nor heard you express such sentiments." Then was presented to Dupuy the possibility of denying that he had written the letter, and declaring that anything which might be presented purporting to be the original was a forgery. Up to that time the minister had refused to admit to his friends that he had written the letter. He had no knowledge of the whereabouts of the original. When he put a bold face on the matter, and added by the proof that no such letter had reached Canalejas, deny the authenticity of the letter. The minister's denial was passed on the next day. Late after the office hours were over, the assistant secretary of state called at the Spanish legation. The tall, blond Anglo-Saxon of purest type read, and failing to find a small swarthy Latin of an attendant. The duel of diplomacy began. "You have seen in the papers, Mr. Minister," said the assistant secretary, "a letter purporting to have been written by you to Mr. Canalejas." Diplomacy would have admitted the seeing and would have fenced for the next point. To the credit of the Spaniard it must be said that he was not taken in by the diplomat in the same way. "Yes," he said, "I have seen it. I wrote it." A moment later he had occasion to realize that truth is better than diplomacy. The assistant secretary, conversing with the minister, in the meantime at the quick admission of the point which he had come, immediately put his hand in his inside pocket of his coat and drew forth the original of the letter, asking the minister to sign it. The minister signed the letter, and at once identified the copy as the original. As he did so there was a ghost of a smile in the corners of his mouth. He must have been thinking of the trap into which diplomacy would have led him, but from which truth telling had saved him.

EXAMINE THEM.

The "Coffee-Never-Hurt-Me" People.

Some famous brain workers have made a welcome discovery along the line of recovery of health by the proper selection of food. Several were of the "Coffee-never-hurt-me" kind, but, as an experiment, tried leaving it off ten days, and the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee in its place. A definite and decided improvement in health is practically certain to attend such a change.

Look carefully into the state of health of the individual who knows that "coffee doesn't hurt me," and you are almost sure to find some form of physical ail or functional disturbance—perhaps muddled complexion, or weak eyes, incipient heart failure, kidney trouble, liver or bowel disorders, or some form of weakness that shows plainly enough by the cry for relief sent up from some organ of the body.

Why does the dismissal of Coffee and the use of Postum bring help? Experiments in artificial digestion show clearly to the scientific investigator that Coffee arrests digestion, and according to one authority, allows only 61 per cent. of the food to be digested. That strikes at the very key-stone to the arch of health. Failure in digestion means lack of good blood, and therefore a lack of food for the nerve centers. As the nerves control the organs of the entire body, one can readily understand that a disorganized nervous system may show effect in any part of the body. Therefore, a removal of the cause will allow nature to right herself. A powerful assistant to nature is Postum Cereal Food Coffee, composed of the albumen, phosphates, gluten, etc., from which nature builds in the delicate tissues of the nerves.

Postum aids digestion without drugging, and furnishes a concentrated liquid food, as well as a most delicious morning coffee.

If the reader has ever failed to make Postum satisfactorily, it will be found that to allow it to boil 15 minutes after boiling commences, will solve the problem, as it must be so boiled to extract taste, color and food value. It is the only original Food Coffee with a pleasant coffee flavor. Many imitations of it are now upon the market. The only palatable ones thus far tested prove to be made of a low grade of coffee and some other articles, notwithstanding the bold claims that they are "pure."

It is not often that the principal law officer of a government, while acknowledging the existence of a statute, publicly and officially declares in parliament that he does not propose to take any steps to enforce it. Yet this is precisely what the attorney general of England has done.
