MEXICAN LINE NO BARRIER TO FLOW OF BOOZE

Only Handful of Federal Men to Guard Knee Deep Rio Grande.

FIGHTS ARE FREQUENT

Smugglers Cross Boundary in El Paso, Laredo and Nogales.

WOMEN TRICK GUARDS

Establishment of Dry Zone in Mexico Considered by Government.

Herewith is published the seventh of a series of articles setting forth the results of an investigation of wholesale liquor smuggling across the border.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 12.—The Mexican border is "seeing ghosts." Down along the Texas-New Mexico Arizona line, where the 1,500 long, arid miles impenetrable stone monuments, silent cactus bushes and the shallow Rio Grande separate the moist oases of Mexico from the "bone dry wastes" of the United States, old John Barleycorn has returned to earth to haunt and terrorize complacent prohibitionists and to bring solace to his boon companions who have been withering since January 16.

With the official demise of Barleycorn last January many were inclined to consider the liquor problems of this country settled. The Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution declared the manufacture, sale and transportation of wet goods a violation of the law.

Bootleggers Infest the Border. But with wet Mexico on one side of the line and on the other a ready market for the thousands of gallons of American whiskey that flowed into the southern republic just before the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect, the inevitable has happened.

American made whiskeys may be had at prices ranging from $10 to $15 a quart. Tequila and other Mexican intoxicants are available from bootleggers at $4 to $5 a quart.

Shevlin Called to the Task. Trial proved that it was impossible to enforce the liquor laws in this vast territory with the limited personnel provided for the work.

Mr. Kramer also decided to place James A. Shevlin, who had won fame by his active work against liquor traffic in New York, in charge of the newly created district.

"He may have cleaned up New York," said one of the diamond-bedecked gentry of line runners, "but his coming won't hurt our business. The knee deep Rio Grande and the imaginary line of New Mexico and Arizona are too easy to cross for any handful of Federal men to ruin this game.

Trouble Ahead for the Smuggler. But despite the complacency of the innumerable line runners the opinion is generally held that the border will witness a vigorous fight to put a stop to liquor traffic.

any means. Their work is done under cover of darkness. Hereofore it has not been necessary for them to go far from towns along the border to cross the line safely.

Fights Are Frequent. Fights along the border between officers and line runners occur often. Their frequency promises to increase with Mr. Shevlin's advent.

Patronage of Tourists. Furthermore, the life of these towns is the American tourist trade. The tastes of many men have not changed since the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect.

Tricks of Women Smugglers. Another variety of smuggler—women—generally compose this class—attempt to slip past the immigration authorities at the international bridges along the Texas border.

At El Paso and Laredo. While liquor smuggling is not confined to any section of the border, El Paso and Laredo, opposite the Mexican towns of Juarez and Nuevo Laredo, are regarded by Federal officials as the principal points of entry.

Mexico Itself May Go Dry. However, prohibition in Mexico is regarded as a possibility at an early date. Even though prohibition is not put into effect in the entire republic the belief is current along the border that a dry zone extending fifty to a hundred miles south of the international line will be established.

Camel CIGARETTES

DEAR OLD BOY PETE! This corner of the U.S. mainland is so wonderful in its bigness and bustle I guess I go mouth wide open and eyes staring!

Heard a bird in the Adolphus hotel say that when he comes off the west border he figures he's close home to Baltimore when he's across the Lone Star state!

Pete, everything grows big down here - business as well as folks' hearts! I like the way they never forget! Here I was walking on Main Street yesterday when a fine a type of man as ever wore one of those broad Texas smiles came up to me.

Golly, Pete, this party coins Camel compliments faster than the mint makes money! "Lieutenant," says he, "I know when I'm set! I've smoked cigarettes for five years! (NOW LISTEN, PETER!) I know Camels and I know their marvellous mild, mellow body and refreshing flavor and wonderful Turkish and Domestic blend!
