

Prominent and Wealthy
Young Men Making
Good in Business

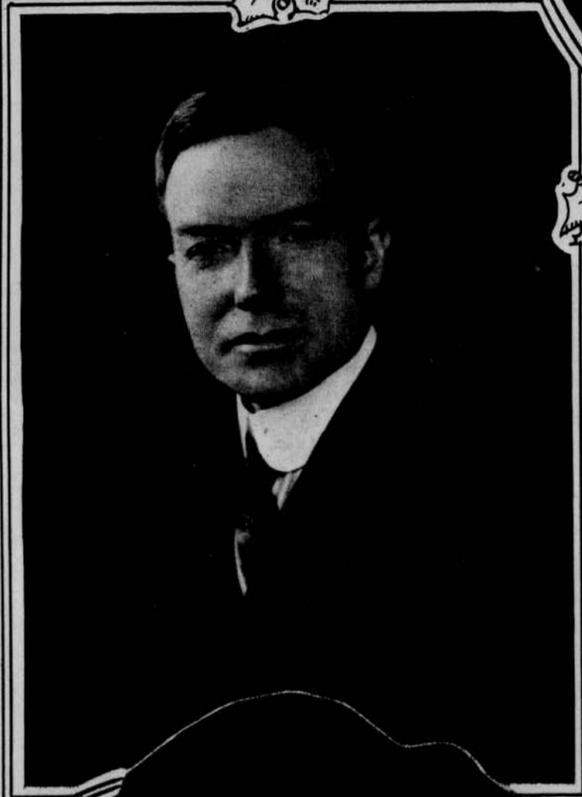

Above — Ogden L. Mills, Representative in Congress from the Seventeenth New York district, who devotes himself to the public service.
Copyright Underwood & Underwood.

E. Marshall Field of Chicago, who began his business career in a bond office and is now managing the vast Marshall Field estate.

Above — Robert B. Roosevelt, Jr., an active factor in a Wall street investment house and a steady worker at his chosen task.
Copyright Underwood & Underwood.

At right — John D. Rockefeller, Jr., divides his working hours between business and philanthropy, with the last named getting the major share.
Copyright Underwood & Underwood.

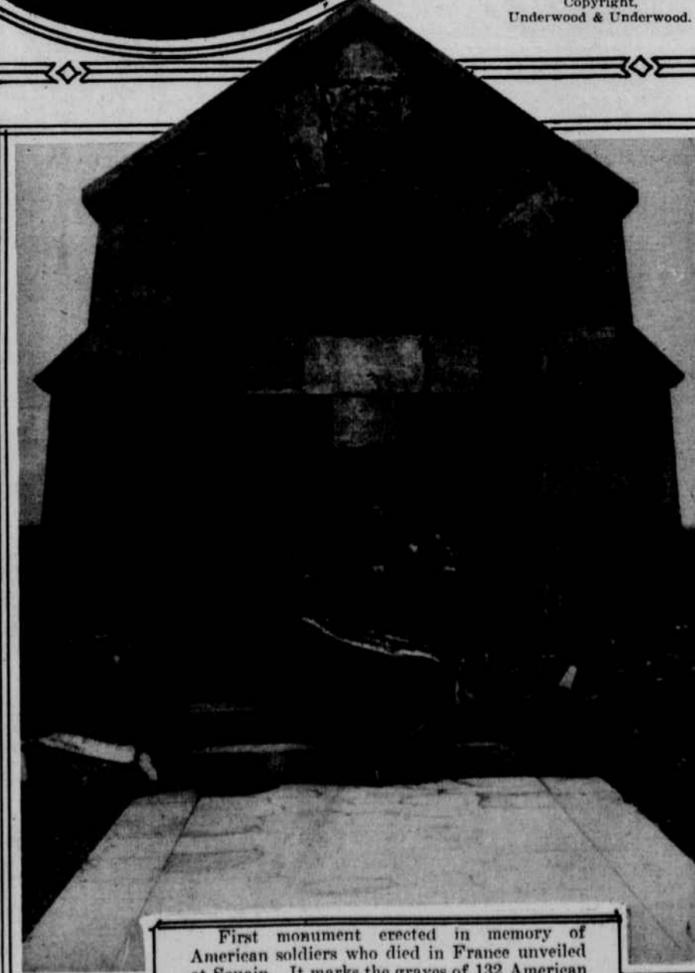

In circle — John Hays Hammond, Jr., as an inventor promises to rank high. His torpedo, directed by wireless, is in process of even greater development.
Copyright Underwood & Underwood.

This charming member of Washington's younger set is Miss Paz Pamintuan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Florentino Pamintuan of the Philippines.
Copyright Harris & Ewing.

In honor of the women of America whose sons were killed in the war. This statue, "The Gold Star Mother," is by Sigvold Bjornson, and it stands at the entrance of the Chicago Historical Society's building.
Photo, International

First monument erected in memory of American soldiers who died in France unveiled at Souain. It marks the graves of 132 American members of the Foreign Legion.
Photo, Wide World.