

Copyright, 1921, Sun-Herald Corporation.

Lieut. Kloor (at left) and Lieut. Hinton, two of the navy balloonists, photographed just after their arrival at Mattice on their way home. Kloor commanded the balloon that carried the three naval officers far into the Canadian wilds.

Copyright, International.

The long, long trail through snow covered Canada followed by the navy balloonists. Lieut. S. A. Farrell leading the dog teams into Mattice, after 15 days' walk from Moose Factory, near which the runaway balloon landed.

Copyright, International.

Lieut. Farrell's first cigarette after arriving at Mattice. This picture gives an excellent idea of his physical condition. It was Lieut. Hinton's comment on his fellow officer's fatigue that caused their unfortunate flight after reaching civilization.

Copyright, International.

Just before the lost balloonists started from Mattice for home aboard a special car. Left to right: W. B. Way, Superintendent Canadian Northern Railway; Lieut. S. O. Farrell; Lieut. A. L. Kloor, Jr.; Lieut. Walter Hinton, the three balloonists, and a newspaper correspondent.

Copyright, International.