New York's amateur boxers won the Intercity tournament in Madison Square Garden last night after a close struggle with the Pittsburgh thumpers. The Metropolitan Association, in which the New York gladiators were represented, scored 29 points to 21 by the Smokey City men. The Middle Atlantic Association scored 8 points and the New Englanders 6.

Jack Zivic of Pittsburgh, regarded as the best amateur boxer in the country, felled the New York boxing enthusiasts when he eliminated Archie Walker of the Pastime A. C. holder of the State title in the final bout in the 125-pound class of the intercity tourney. It was Walker's first defeat in two years.

Zivic and his friends contended that he would be a winner and he justified the expectation. In the first round, Walker made a strong, courageous fight, but Zivic was too strong and combative for him and beat him into submission after four sizzling rounds.

Zivic was entitled to the decision at the end of the third round, but the disagreement of the judges necessitated a fourth round, in which the Pittsburgher demonstrated his superiority. In the second round, the great fight of the Pastime A. C. of this city, won the final in the heavy-weight division in hollow fashion. His opponent was John Flaherty of the Young Men's Club of Soho, New York, who won by two minutes and two seconds in the first round. The big red thatched man from Pittsburgh was completely outboxed.

165 Pound Class—Final—Won by T. P. McManus, Willow A. C., Pittsburgh, over Henry Ford of Boston; Judges' decision; three rounds.

155 Pound Class—Final—Won by Jack Rovesti, Pittsburgh, over Dan Kelly, Boston, by knockout after 1 minute and 20 seconds of the second round. Kelly was floored with a heavy right hander and was carried to his corner.

Bantam Weight Class. 115 Pound Class—First Bout—Won by William Singer, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., New York, over Christopher De Marco of Pittsburgh. The judges disagreed at the end of the third round and the referee ordered another round. The judges again disagreed at the close of the fourth session, and the referee gave the decision to Singer. The bout was slow and uninteresting, with neither man having any special advantage.

Second Bout—Won by Louis Guglielmini, Pastime A. C., New York, over Frank Wallace, Boston, judges decision, three rounds. This bout was very interesting, both boys hitting with considerable effect. Wallace was the better boxer, but Guglielmini was the stronger and the heavier hitter. Wallace was very tired at the close.

Final—Singer won by default from Louis Guglielmini.

Lightweight Class. 125 Pound Class—First Bout—Won by J. Guinan, Philadelphia, over Thomas Kirby of Boston, by knockout with right to the jaw after one minute in the second round. Kirby collapsed after a knockout punch, but in the course of a few minutes recovered and left the ring. Kirby is a courageous fighter, but Guinan had the experience and had Kirby in a rather bad condition in the first round. Kirby was on the defensive in the second round and was sent away when he received a right hook to the chin.

Second Bout—Won by Jack Zivic, Willow A. C., Pittsburgh, over Archie Walker, Pastime A. C., New York, State champion; judges' decision after four rounds. The judges disagreed after the third round and referee Eddie Forbes gave an extra round. The elimination of Walker from the finals was the sensation of the night. Zivic while not so good a boxer as Walker, was stronger and a heavier puncher, although most of his blows were swung in the direction of Walker from the finals was the sensation of the night.

When Walker early in the first round staggered Zivic it looked as if the Pastime lad was going to score a quick victory, but the rugged Pittsburgher who represented America in the Olympic bouts quickly recovered from the effects of the punch and later in the same round staggered Walker with a series of blows to the head. The round was fairly even. Zivic took a commanding lead in the second session, forcing the fight all the way and sending Archie to his corner rather tired.

The third stanza was hotly contested, each landing staggering blows, but Zivic's aggressiveness earned him the honors. The judges, Heyle and Stumph, gave the victory to the host. Zivic's aggressiveness and the referee ordered another round. Zivic had all the better of the fourth round, putting Walker almost entirely on the defensive and hammering him hard up to the close of the session. The judges had no difficulty in picking the winner.

Final—Won by Jack Zivic, Willow A. C., Pittsburgh, over J. Guinan, Philadelphia; judges' decision; three rounds. Zivic outclassed his man, but Guinan took a terrific beating in each round without clinching and was on his feet at the close.

Welterweight Class. 145 Pound Class—First bout won by Milton Weiss, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., New York State champion, over Jack Tait of Pittsburgh, referee's decision, at end of four rounds. The judges disagreed at end of third round and referee ordered another round. The judges again disagreed. Referee Forbes decided in favor of Weiss.

Second Bout—Won by Louis Zimmer, National Turn Verein of Newark, over Bill Sullivan of Boston, by knockout after 1 minute 40 seconds in first round. Sullivan was outclassed, was knocked Second Bout—Won by Magnus Lawson, Norwegian Turn Verein, New York, by knockout over William Connelly, Boston, after boxing twenty-six seconds in the second round. Connelly had things his own way in the first round, jabbing Lawson in the face and body without return, the Norwegian taking the punishment with the utmost good nature. In the second round Connelly landed a blow a trifle heavier than the first one, which infuriated the Norwegian. Lawson made a rush at Connelly, swinging right and left, and beat his man to the floor. He was unable to continue and the referee stopped the bout and awarded the decision to Lawson.

HIGH LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT

THE New York Boxing Commission has done commendable work in its supervision of the sport since the Walker law went into effect, and in the main has administered the law in a praiseworthy manner. It is doubtful if any organization could handle the sport with 100 per cent. efficiency, and this applies to all other branches of athletics. So far as the boxers and others interested in the sport are concerned, the commission has compelled them to walk a chalk mark, live up to contracts and treat patrons with fairness. On the surface the public has little to complain of, for it has received a square deal.

But there are many things in which the public is not interested that call for corrective action by the commission. One of them relates to the dual activities of certain matchmakers.

Rule 27 of the commission rules reads as follows: "No officer, matchmaker or stockholder of any corporation shall officiate in any capacity at any boxing contest or exhibition or interfere in any way with the contestants."

In spite of this plain wording, Leo P. Flynn, matchmaker of the Madison Square Garden Sporting Club, who manages a greater number of boxers than any other man in America, frequently acts as a second to boxers under his control. Flynn was in the ring behind Bill Brennan when that boxer was receiving final instructions from Referee Johnny Haukopf for the bout with Bob Martin, and Flynn was in Brennan's corner throughout the contest.

Not only does Flynn act as a second in Garden bouts, but he also appears in the corners occupied by his men at other clubs in this city. If Flynn is to be permitted to violate the rule of every other matchmaker in the State must be allowed to do likewise or be subject to discrimination.

Section 15 of the Walker law prohibits any corporation having, directly or indirectly, any financial interest in a boxer, and the commission regulation as to matchmakers seems to cover the situation. By instructing Flynn to remain out of the corners of boxers in all clubs the commission will make a move calculated to have a salutary effect on all other matchmakers.

Another rule of the commission prohibits a boxer taking the name used by another boxer. The commission has compelled two or three offenders to change their names, but when a featherweight known for years as "Young Fulton" and who never was known as Fred Fulton took the heavyweight's name no action was taken by the commission.

The commission has a rule that compels seconds to appear in neat attire, including jerseys of plain colors, yet many seconds get into the ring looking as though they had just been discharged from the hobo army. The referees wear becoming costumes, and the contrast between them and the seconds is startling.

The Future of the Grass Court. "It will be a matter of only about ten years," William T. Tilden is quoted as saying, "when the grass court will be on its last legs." The great cost of its upkeep and the fact that the care of the turf is too arduous are given as the reasons for the prediction. Pointing out the scarcity of grass courts in this country, the tennis champion then intimates that the championship of the future is likely to be played on asphalt instead. There can be no denying the correctness of Tilden's observations regarding the cost, the care and the scarcity of turf courts, but the great majority of tennis officials will be inclined to differ with him in his prediction regarding the future of the grass court. Turf courts are not plentiful, but their number is increasing. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Seabright, Newport and Southampton have satisfactory turf courts. Clubs in Chicago, Minneapolis and Cleveland are arranging to have them this season, and the movement is likely to spread. As regards the difficulty of keeping grass courts in condition, the suggestion may be made that the adoption of the English rule barring the use of spikes on turf will go a long way toward solving the problem. At Wimbledon last summer the turf courts at the end of fourteen days of play in the British championship were said to be little the worse for wear. At any rate lawn tennis always will have more appeal than asphalt tennis to the lover of the sport, and critics for some time to come will continue to regard the grass court game as the best test of tennis champions.

JACKSON RESUMES FEUD WITH DUNDEE

Noted Lightweights to Meet in Combat To-night in the Garden.

The Willie Jackson-Johnny Dundee dispute is one of a few pugilistic serials of which the patrons of boxing never seem to tire. The reason for the sustained interest in the bouts between these two noted lightweights is that they crowd unlimited action into every contest. Jackson is a hard hitting, aggressive fighter and Dundee is the most spectacular ring performer ever seen outside of a three ring circus.

They have met ten times in the squared circle, and only once, in their first encounter, was there a decisive result. Dundee being flattened for the count of ten in the first session of a bout in Philadelphia.

Ever since that knockout Dundee has been trying to turn the tables on Jackson, and the Harlem lightweight has been endeavoring to repeat the trick.

A majority of the bouts between the boys have been of the short decisionless variety, giving each a chance to claim victory. In to-night's match the distance to be travelled is fifteen rounds, and there will be a decision in the event of the contest lasting the limit.

Jackson expresses the opinion that he will score a second knockout over the Italian, as he will have plenty of time in which to wear Dundee down and lull him to sleep.

Undoubtedly there will be great interest in the encounter, and this will be heightened by the probability of the winner being matched with Leonard. The champion announces his willingness to meet the victor in a ring contest, and Jackson and Dundee insist they are eager for a title match.

Perhaps an interesting bout preliminary to the chief event will be that between Hugh Hutchinson of Philadelphia and Kid Dube of England. Hutchinson, who is an Italian named Joseph Curran, so he rechristened him Johnny Dundee. But Hughie Hutchinson, whose ancestors lived in the land of the thistle and heather, needs no rechristening.

Physically Jackson and Dundee are well matched, Jackson having a slight advantage in height and reach. To offset this Dundee can dance three times as fast as Jackson.

Benny Valzer has joined the boxing staff of William Gibson, and the latter has not advertised his man as the champion of any class in France. This is an auspicious start, and Valzer may possibly get a match with Kilbane in the future.

George Ward, the clever Jersey welter, will meet Johnny Summers, the A. B. F. welter, in a fifteen round bout at the Broadway Exhibition tomorrow night Monday. This should be a lively encounter.

BENNY LEONARD IS VICTOR OVER WELLING. ST. LOUIS, Feb. 24.—Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, easily outfought Joe Welling of Chicago in an eight round no decision bout here to-night, according to newspaper men who witnessed the contest.

The champion was given the decision in every round for aggressiveness and ring generalship. In the fifth Welling took the count of eight as the result of a Welling fought defensively throughout the contest, holding Leonard around the neck with his left and simultaneously striking with his right.

In the seventh round Welling was admonished twice against fouling. The men fought at catch weights.

KNOCKOUT FOR MURRAY. Johnny Murray last night knocked out Kid Kidney in the fifth round in the Commonwealth Sporting Club in Harlem. Kid McFarland, the referee, stopped the contest to save Diamond from further punishment. The bout was to have been a twelve round contest.

In a ten round bout Charles Stielman received the judges' decision over Al Brown.

LAFAYETTE FIVE VICTORIES. At the end of the first half the score was 19 to 13 in their favor.
