Lambs in Gambol Add $6,300 to the Club Soldier Fund

Jolly Entertainment at the Globe Theatre for Cause of Disabled Men.

At the Globe Theatre last night the Lambs gave that intimate Gambol that they didn't say much about in advance except that it would take place and that some non-lambs would be enabled to look in.

It was learned during the course of a delightful evening that the club had arranged the event to take care of a deficit of $6,300 in their fund for entertaining disabled soldiers. The Lambs spent for that purpose during the last year $15,000 in giving dinners and buying theatre tickets for the men, and this was $6,300 more than they got in from subscriptions and contributions.

And did they get it back last night? They did. And they give full value in the way of entertainment? They did. It was a typical Lambs bill, staged in fine style, with some of the best things on it just labelled musical surprises.

One was the appearance of Francis MacMillen, violinist, who played a concerto charmingly until his G string broke and afterward. The other was the Brown Brothers in their saxophone melody and fun. Irving Fisher in his own and others' songs was another musical entertainer.

Miss Lillian Russell was there in green and diamonds in a box to be named Queen of the Stage and honored guest of the Lambs by Wilton Lockaye in his most gracious manner and to receive almost as many American Beauties as there are Lambs from the hands of De Wolf Hopper. For this she made a speech saying she had come from Effingham to be among her own people and was completely happy. With her was her daughter, Miss Dorothy Russell.

Frank Craven wrote and acted in a sketch called "Camille" (in Great Neck), showing how various New York managers might produce the Dumas play, pecking on Smith and Golden, C. B. Dillingham, Fio Ziegfeld, A. L. Brininger and others.

Emmett Crozier acted in his "Law of the Gang," a one act play tragedy, that furnished enough thrilling drama for a much longer play.

Barney Bernard told funny stories about Jews and Gentiles. Gene Bock promised a prologue act and introduced Van and Schenck, Harry C. Brown sang and the audience, including George Ade and Sheriff Knott, sang with him. Shepherd H. H. Burnside made an announcement and ran things generally on the stage.

Edwin Milton Rothen's satire, "Four Angle Triangle," with Clarence Nordstrom and Otto Kruger as the ladies and a girl, was received with delight. Hal Ford's play, "Ten Thousand," entitled Edwin Mordant, Riehe Liss, George Howell, Ernest Glendinning and George L. Guerin, the latter playing the honest girl stenographer who turned out to be the biggest crook of all.

Raymond Hubbard led some of his own music now and then. Edward Locke, another good Lambs actor, acted in "Grandpa McGilroy" comedy. Sixteen Lambs, without permission of Mr. Dillingham, gave a hilarious imitation of the sixteen Palace girls in "Tip Top" doing their best.

And for a grand finale they revived "Nick of the Woods," a melodrama, and a musical comedy, "The Honorable Frederick Perry."

Lambs' wives and sisters and sweethearts sold programmes and candy and carnations and nearly everything you can name.

$16,000 FOR SOLDIERS' FUND. Stage Women's War Relief Drive in Theatres a Success.

As the result of a drive in New York theatres on Saturday night the Stage Women's War Relief will be able to continue the giving of entertainment for wounded soldiers who are in hospital. The work, threatened with suspension because of depleted funds, is assured through a collection that netted $16,000.

A committee of the stage women's organization called upon Sam H. Harris, president of the Producing Managers Association, and through his efforts obtained a permission to collect on Saturday night's drive. Collections were made in every legitimate theatre in New York and in many of the motion picture houses.

Among the theatre folk who helped materially in making the drive a success were Miss Rachel Crothers, Mrs. Chatterjee O'Leary, Misses Doris Keane, Laurette Taylor, Marie Kennedy, Marie Dressler, Mary Kirkpatrick, Frances Starr, Florence Larimore, Effie Elster, Florence Nash and Miriam Dupree. Leo Dirschel, Lew Fields, Frank Crozier, Arthur Byron, Grant Mitchell, Roland Young, Hale Hamilton, Frank Bacon, Cosmo Hamilton, Henry Hull, Reginald Barkley, William Harrison and Edmund Breese.

The largest single collection was made at the Klaw Theatre, where the audience contributed $1,600.

'Queen of Sheba' Is Realistic Film Filled With Action

William Fox's latest picture, "The Queen of Sheba," may be said to "out-her" that classic "Ben Hur." For this spectacular, progressively interesting, highly colored and highly powered epic story of the days of Oriental splendor has a keenly stirring chariot race in which the winner draws a real "heat" while some people seem to think axes in the title of Gen. Lew Wallace's famous story.

The feminine note might be said to be sounded with trumpets all through this gorgeous and vivid picture, especially with those horns that announce the race before King Solomon between the Princess Vashti, who aspires to his favor, and the Queen of Sheba, who doesn't have to aspire—she has it. This represents the first chariot race between women in history, and the ladies certainly go it around the imposing course regardless of traffic regulations. Driving automobiles seems to have made our modern movie actresses absolutely cowboys—riding, racing and shooting.

It is the most exciting race ever put on the screen, and had the young women in the audience last night bobbing about in their seats in a fever to have the Queen win. Of course she did, driving Solomon's own stallions, but that didn't settle her troubles—not by several rees.

In addition there were other chariot races—some of a dozen or more of these vehicles careering madly around the course with drivers falling—and "Roman races" with an occasional tumbler to keep the interest alive.

It is a magnificent achievement for J. Gordon Edwards, the director, for there are impressive vistas of Caravans winding their way across the desert, and the grand entry of the Queen into Solomon's court, and mounted troops and foot soldiers charging across the sands to rescue Solomon with the heading horns of a herd of American cowboys. There is nothing slow about this picture—every one dashes off in a chariot or on a horse, or rushes on foot as though after a world's record.

Assassinations are featured and fiery battles reminiscent of the fall of Babylon. The settings, designed by R. E. Sibley, are colossal and imposing, giving fascinating glimpses of Solomon's palace, of the Temple and other monumental structures which constitute a lively and exciting course in archeology. By and large, it is a pulse quickening production that combines the circus with a Wild West show.

Though numerous authorities are listed for the story, Miss Virginia Tracy seems to have relied more on that of Mrs. Margaret Adkinson Berry, daughter of Dr. Daniel H. V. Stuart, Jr., son of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Stuart of Washington, the wedding to take place in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Adams announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marie H. Adams, to Major J. Craig King. The wedding will take place in May. Major King is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. James C. King of Reynoldsville, Pa.

'Small Town Idol,' New Sennett Film of Fun and Thrills

Ben Turpin, the Man With Remarkable Eyes, in Leading Role—Other Pictures.

Mark Sennett is such a master of the "film farce" that in "A Small Town Idol" he can make comedians even of cows and fishes. The latest excursion of the producer in this line, which is the week at the Rialto, uses up every possible variant of the burlesque on the rural mellowhammer in his wildest form, so that the picture is a fever to have the all but shakes down the plaster of the Rialto with laughter as the plaster in a regular Sennett hot film is shaken.

The movies themselves are held up to rib-wrecking satire, and one spectacle is a good natured takeoff in it on D. W. Griffith, Sennett's old boss, for besides other reminders of "Way Down East" there is a bisecting scene at the village of the hero and heroine are rescued by—oh, sublime fancy!—a mackerel. There is a plot, of course—every Sennett picture has a real plot, and the plot of "Small Town Idol" is a rather simple one, but it is an ordinary slapstick affair—but it moves so fast and obtrusively that no moviegoer could keep up with it.

Suffice it that Ben Turpin, that finishing comedian, who has been the remarkable eye that constantly trying to make each other's acquaintance, plays a heroic role. He is driven from his village falsely accused of theft, becomes a hero in the movie by doing a stunt leap when he is really trying to commit suicide, and returns a typical Sennett hero.

It is a hilarious and thrilling affair, tinged with comic scenes, and the final impression is a series of snapshots of a man and a girl on a horse that leaps off a tall cliff into the sea, a girl who is rescued by a man, and a man who is rescued by a girl.
