THE MAN-POWER OF A GREAT CITY

SWIRLING back and forth through the arteries of trade and commerce, inspired by the first great impulse of human nature—the impulse to survive—the man-power of this great city "carries on" its daily work under the protection which society has built up around it.

Think of the thousands of positions of trust and great responsibility! Think of the temptations that beset this great, bustling, active community of workers, in the busiest city in the world!

And then think what it means to the growth of the Nation's business that the integrity of so many men of responsibility is guaranteed by the American Surety Company of New York. What an important link in the industrial and financial fabric that has made America great!

Without the protection of bonds issued by this Company many large concerns and large undertakings would be hampered in their activities.

This protection is at your service. You may consult us freely and without charge.

A large financial institution recently wrote thanking us for the great service we had rendered in pointing out a structural weakness in its relations with some of its trusted employees. Our advice was based upon wide experience, covering many years, in interpreting the normal risk when the human element dominates.
